THE EASTERN QUESTION.

Text of Prince Gorschakoff's Reply to Earl Granville—No Objection to a Conference if Great Britain Pleases.

ST. PETERSBURG, Dec. 2.—The following is the reply of Prince GORTSCHAKOFF to the note of Earl GRANVILLE. It is addressed to the Russian Minister in London, and dated at the Palace of Tsarskoe, Nov. 29:

MONSIEUR LE BARON: The Ambassador of England has read and left with me a copy of Lord GRANVILLE's reply to our communication of the 19th of October, which I submitted to His Majesty the Emperor. Our august master was pleased to point out that it contained, in the first place, an expression of the earnest desire of the Cabinet of London to preserve the cordial relations between England and Russia; and, secondly, an assurance that the English Cabinet would not have refused to enter into an examination of the results of the Treaty of 1856, so far as they had been modified by circumstances.

As for the question of strict right stated by Lord GRANVILLE, we have no wish to enter into any discussion, to recall any precedent, or to cite any example. Such a controversy would in no way promote the good understanding which we desire. Our august master had to discharge an imperious duty to his own country, without wishing to injure in any way the Governments which were signatories of the Treaty of 1856. On the contrary, His Imperial Majesty appeals to their sense of justice and to their regard for their own dignity.

We regret to see that Earl GRANVILLE addresses himself principally to the form of our communication. The form was not our choice. We could have asked nothing better, surely, than to attain our end by an agreement with the signatories of the Treaty of 1856; but the principal Secretaries of State of Her Britannic Majesty well know that the attempts made at different times to assemble the Powers in a general conference, with a view to remove the causes of difficulty which disturb the general peace, have invariably failed.

The prolongation of the present crisis, and the absence of a regular Government in France, postpone still further the possibility of such an agreement. Meanwhile, the position in which the treaty left Russia has become more and more intolerable. Earl GRANVILLE will agree that the Europe of today is very far from being the Europe which signed the Treaty of 1856. It is impossible that Russia should agree to remain the only Power bound indefinitely to an arrangement which, onerous as it was at the time when it was concluded, became daily weaker in its guarantees. Our august master has too deep a sense of what he owes to his country to force it to submit any longer to an obligation against which the national sentiment protests. We cannot admit that the abrogation of a purely theoretical principle, not followed by its immediate application, and which visibly restores to Russia a right of which no great Power could consent to be deprived, ought to be considered as a menace to peace, nor that, in avoiding one point of the Treaty of 1856, the abrogation of all is implied. The Imperial Cabinet never had any such intention. On the contrary, our communication of Oct. 19 declared, in the most explicit terms, that His Majesty, the Emperor, maintains his adhesion to the general principles of the Treaty of 1856, and that he is ready to come to an agreement with the signatory Powers of that treaty, either to confirm its general stipulations or to renew them, or to substitute for them any other equitable arrangement which may be thought suitable to secure the repose of the East and the equilibrium of Europe.

There seems, then, to be no reason why the Cabinet of London should not, if it pleases, enter into an explanation with the signatories of the Treaty of 1856. For our part, we are ready in any deliberation having for its object the settlement of guarantees for the consolidation of peace in the East.

We are persuaded that fresh guarantees would be found in the removal of a permanent cause of irritation existing between the two Powers which are the most directly interested. Their mutual relations would be more firmly established on the basis of a good and solid understanding.

You are desired, Monsieur le Baron, to read this dispatch and leave a copy of it with him.

The principal Secretary of State of her Britannic Majesty has expressed to us the regret that he would feel if this discussion should disturb the harmony which the Government of her Majesty the Queen has striven to maintain between the two countries. Be good enough to express to his Excellency how entirely this regret would be shared by the Imperial Cabinet. We believe that friendship between the two Governments essentially useful to the two countries, as well as to the peace of the world. It is with lively satisfaction that we have seen this friendship during late years grow more and more close and cordial. The grave circumstances in which we find ourselves at this moment seem to us to make it more desirable than ever. (Signed.) GORTSCHAKOFF.

Participation of France in the Proposed Conference.

VIENNA, Dec. 2.—The Neue Freie Presse this morning has an editorial on the Black Sea difficulty, wherein it says that France will participate in the deliberations of the conference to be held at London. Vienna was at first selected as the place for holding the conference, but Austria objected. The preliminary discussions will involve questions other than those connected with the Paris Treaty of 1856.

TOURS, Dec. 2.—The members of the Government here have referred to their colleagues in Paris the English note, asking France to take part in the conference on the Eastern question.

BERLIN, Dec. 2.—It is asserted that at the conference which has been called for the settlement of the Eastern question, a new treaty will be proposed, omitting all reference to the neutralization of the Black Sea.

THE WAR IN FRANCE.

French Reports of the Recent Operations at Paris—Trochu and De Paladines Said to Have Formed a Junction—The Fighting During the Sorties.

LONDON, Dec. 2.—A special dispatch to the London Times from Tours, dated Dec. 1, says: "The Army of the Loire has effected a junction with Gen. TROCHU's forces from Paris. The Germans under Prince FREDERICK CHARLES are retiring before the united armies. It is said TROCHU has with him outside the walls, 150,000 men and 300 cannon."

THE TOURS MONITEUR'S STORY.

TOURS, Dec. 2.—The Moniteur of this city has the following details:

"On the morning of the 29th ult. the first sortie of the French garrison of Paris was begun at Choisy le Roi, L'Hay and Chevilly. The battle in that neighborhood lasted all the night of the 30th and till the next night. Gen. DUCROT then crossed the Marne, and occupied Meaux. Subsequently he evacuated that point, and engaged the enemy at Champigny, fighting his way to Brie. He then marched back to the Marne, recrossed that river by eight pontoon bridges, and maintained his position on the bank. He took two guns from the Prussians. He has since taken position at Thernay."

GAMBETTA'S ACCOUNT.

LAVAL, Dec. 2.—The city is overjoyed with the dispatches from M. GAMBETTA, announcing the great successes at Paris, where sorties were made in force, defeating the Prussians along the entire line. The line of battle was many miles in extent. A great number of prisoners and cannon have been captured by the French. The corps were commanded by Gens. TROCHU, DUCROT, and VINOIT. M. GAMBETTA, in announcing the victory, says that one of the results of it has been the evacuation of Amiens by the Prussians, who hastily started for Paris to reinforce the German Army. The battles at Paris began on Tuesday, the 29th, and at the last accounts the garrison remained outside in the positions they had captured from the Prussians.

TOURS, Dec. 1—Evening.—The city is intensely excited. In response to the shouts of the people, M. GAMBETTA appeared, and praised Gens. TROCHU and DUCROT for their successful sortie. He also reiterated the statement that the French victory had compelled the hasty evacuation of Amiens, and that the Germans from that point were hastening to the assistance of the besieging army.

Prussian Reports—The French Sorties all Repulsed Ultimately—King William's Dispatch—Reports of Corps Generals.

LONDON, Dec. 2.—A dispatch from Prince GEORGE, of SAXONY, has been received by the King of SAXONY. It describes the fighting at Noisy and Villiers, in which the Saxon troops took part, and states that the French were repulsed, and driven over the heights between the two villages, leaving behind hundreds of prisoners. The French attacking force numbered 50,000. The loss of the Saxons was twelve officers and one hundred privates. The King of Wurtemberg has sent a dispatch to Gen. GRAVERTZ congratulating him on the gallantry displayed by the Wurtemberg troops. Later accounts increase the loss of the Wurtembergers.

KING WILLIAM'S DISPATCH.

BERLIN, Dec. 2.—King WILLIAM sends by telegraph the following dispatch to Queen AUGUSTA, dated at Versailles on the 30th:

The Sixth Corps yesterday repulsed a sortie of the French near L'Hay, on the south of Paris. Over one hundred French prisoners were taken, and several hundred dead and wounded were left on the field. The French also made sorties on the positions of the Wurtembergers and Saxons at Bonnevet, Champigny and Villiers, to the east and south, east of Paris. The positions were taken by the French, but subsequently retaken by the Prussians. At the same time sorties were made at the north and west, and at St. Denis, against the Bavarians and the Guard. The French were repulsed and driven back behind their works in all cases. I remained at Versailles, as it was central point. WILHELM.

GENERAL OBERWITZ'S REPORT.

BERLIN, Dec. 2.—A telegram from Gen. OBERWITZ to the War Department here, has the following particulars of the part taken by the Wurtembergers in the late actions around Paris. The telegram is dated at Chateau le Pipes on Wednesday: On that day the Second and Third Wurtemberg Brigades, with the Seventh Prussian Brigade, defeated a sortie of the French, made in the direction of Mont Mesli. After five hour's fighting, the Germans took 300 prisoners. The German loss was as follows: Six officers killed and 24 wounded, and 700 rank and file killed and wounded.

GEN. TUMPLING'S REPORT.

BERLIN, Dec. 2.—The following dispatch from Gen. DE TUMPLING, the commander of the Seventh Prussian Corps, has just been received here, dated Thursday: A great sortie occurred yesterday. The French moved out against the Prussians and Wurtembergers early in the morning. They were supported by the heavy cannonade of their forts. Gens. TROCHU and DUCROT commanded, leading 120,000 men. At 11 o'clock in the forenoon, the French were repulsed by the Sixth Corps, and retired. Subsequently, at 3 o'clock in the afternoon, the Wurtembergers, who had been reinforced by cavalry and artillery, were attacked by the French. The latter were again defeated. The German losses were trifling.

THE FRENCH ASK A TRUCE.

VERSAILLES, Dec. 1, via BERLIN and LONDON, Dec. 2.—The French loss in killed, wounded and prisoners in yesterday's sortie is severe. They have just asked a truce for several hours to bury their dead. The Wurtembergers lost forty officers and 800 men. DATOOSSAIL'L Brigade of the Second Corps lost two officers and 700 men. The Saxon loss is unreported. All is quiet today before Paris.

OTHER REPORTS.

The Standard today has war dispatches down to 8 o'clock this morning. A Berlin correspondent telegraphs that according to dispatches from Prussian officers, the French were repulsed in their attempt at a great sortie from Paris on Thursday. The French organ here, however, claims that the engagement before Paris ended in a brilliant victory for the French arms. There are no signs of weakness at Tours. Eleven new entrenched camps are forming throughout France. The Times thinks the policy of the Germans in changing position indicates important new movements, which, though yet undeveloped, are likely to bring about great results.

Dispatches from Paris, dated Nov. 30, say operations by the French commenced yesterday at different points around the city. Gen. DUCROT, with a large force, moved out of Paris and occupied Montrieils, which, however, he was soon compelled to evacuate. The heaviest of the fighting was done at Champigny, Brie and Villers-sur-Marne. The French are now renewing the attack in the South.

The Army of the Loire—Reports from Tours—What Gambetta Says—The German Position Dec. 1—What the German Generals Say.

LONDON, Dec. 2.—Later and more important dispatches have been received from Tours relative to the movements of the Army of the Loire. The movement of the army began on Wednesday, and was directed by the Minister of War. The first operations were favorable. Gen. CHANZY left his position the next day, and found the Prussians entrenched at Guillonville, Fermaintes and Gomera. He immediately gave them battle, which was only ended with the night. The Prussians were compelled to retire, and the positions held by them were captured by the French, where they encamped that night. The French artillery was well handled. The German was heavy, and the French loss very little.

ANNOUNCEMENTS BY GAMBETTA.

LAVAL, Dec. 2.—M. GAMBETTA has publicly announced that the Army of the Loire has successfully resisted an attack on the left and right wings, and is advancing forward. GAMBETTA continues: "Victory now favors the French. 70 Prussians are being shot at Dreux." (Tours.)

GEN. CHANZY'S REPORT.

TOURS, Dec. 2.—Gen. CHANZY reports a successful advance of the French left yesterday. The French carried the first Prussian line, and afterward their positions at Nouvoitte, Villepain and Favrolles. The Prussians retreated on Loigny and Chateau Goubray.

LONDON, Dec. 2.—French successes at Fatay, in the Department of Loiret, are claimed, but they are not yet confirmed.

PRUSSIAN POSITION ON THE 30TH.

TOURS, Dec. 1, midnight.—The Army of the Loire has been engaged with the Prussians today. The position of the latter extended from Chateaudun, where their right was posted, through Joinville to Toury, and from there to Fithiviers and Beaune la Rolande. Their second line in the rear extended from Fontainebleau by the way of Montereau and Villenepteve to Troyes, where it joined the first Prussian line.

THE OTHER SIDE.

LONDON, Dec. 2.—The Times this morning has a special dispatch from Berlin, dated yesterday, to the following effect: Nearly the whole of the French forces are now concentrated between Blois and Tours. If defeated, their retreat upon Lyons is probable. Lyons is a strongly-fortified city, and well provisioned.

MUNICH, Dec. 2.—A dispatch has just been received here announcing that Gen. VON DER TANN defeated the French Army of the Loire on the 1st inst., in several successive battles west of Orleans and Tours.

Amiens not Evacuated by the Germans—Reported Success of Garibaldi—War Excitement in London.

LONDON, Dec. 2.—It is reported that Gen. GARIBALDI has had great success at Autun. Nothing official, however, has been received.....There is much excitement here and throughout England over the war news received from France.

The German War Loan—German Aid for Strasbourg—Breach of Parole by French Officers—Clerical Opposition to the Prussians and the Result—A French Town Burned.

BERLIN, Dec. 2.—The Börsenzeitung of yesterday says the proposal to consolidate the issues of the new loan has been accepted.....The Prussian Government has sent the Strasbourg Savings Bank 1,000,000 thalers in aid of the poor of the city.

LONDON, Dec. 2.—The Prussian Cross Gazette attributes the frequent breaches of parole by French officers to the machinations of the French Government.....The Times this morning has a special telegram from Berlin, dated yesterday, giving the state of affairs in the interior of France. The priests in the rural districts, prompted by DUPANLOUP, are preaching against the Prussians as heretics. The results are consequently terribly incensed against the invaders. German patrols in the valley of the Loire are shot down from every hedge and building. The Prussian bearers of dispatches are killed when nobody but innocent looking plowmen are in sight. Many of these priests have been captured by the Prussians, who will be brought to trial.....The Prussians have burned the town of Charleville, because the Franc-Tireurs of the place fired upon them as they approached. The Germans are still in force at Boulaincourt. [Charleville had a population of about 10,000, a college, an ecclesiastical school, a library of 12,000 volumes, and a theatre. It is separated from Mézières by the Meuse, which is crossed by a suspension bridge.]

Billiards—The $2,000 Match—Garnier will Play Rudolphe and Daly.

It has been agreed upon to play the match for $2,000 a side between CYRILLE DION and A. P. RUDOLPHE, at the Academy of Music, on the 27th inst.

The subjoined communication from M. ALBERT GARNIER may possibly lead to two interesting matches:

NEW-YORK, Dec. 2, 1870.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

SIR: The challenge of M. RUDOLPHE, in which he states he has "played for a long time" with M. GARNIER, has not been made to me. I, to name the table, to be accepted, the game to be the national one of France, 500 points with 60 balls, on a 9 by 18-carom table, the make to be the same as that which Mr. RUDOLPHE is using for his matches with Messrs. PARKES and DION viz., a Peller & Collender. Notwithstanding that Mr. DALY professes to accept a challenge to Messrs. HUMPHREY and KAVANAGH, I desire to say, that while I cannot the three-ball game, Mr. DALY has proposed, "the regular American four-ball carom game, pool and I am barred for good a side." Pool and four-ball are incomparable, even to see, and I know comparatively little about the American game, not even its rules. If Mr. DALY wishes to play me, I will make a match on the same terms as are offered above to Mr. RUDOLPHE, except as to odds, and with the four-ball game for their exception, that is I prefer one make of table and Mr. DALY choosing, I will toss for choice. I shall be happy to meet Messrs. RUDOLPHE and DALY on the afternoon of the 8d inst., between 1 and 6 o'clock, at the rooms of Mr. HENRY BERGH, to arrange preliminaries. A. GARNIER.

Regarding the championship match, PARKER's representative yesterday received instructions to make no further efforts toward adjusting differences, but to adhere strictly to the rules.

ALMOST A RIOT.

Outrage on the Traveling Community by the Erie Railroad Company.

An Effort to Nullify an Agreement with the Morris and Essex Railroad Company—Trains Delayed all Day—Thousands of Passengers Manœuvred—Action of the Governor of New-Jersey—A Disappointed Effected—Pick Generally Much Depleted.

Another speech in the checkered history of the unfortunate Erie Railway occurred yesterday. Hence the terrible slaughter at Carr's Rock, where the sleeping passengers for a mid-night train were plunged into horrible shrieking and death, and the more recent holocaust at Mist Hope, where human beings were imbedded, scorched, and slowly roasted alive, there has not been such a degree of public excitement and indignation.

For some time past there have been various troubles in litigation between the Erie and the Morris and Essex Railroad Companies in regard to the right of way through the Bergen tunnel. The latter party claim that when the former were building the tunnel, years ago, and could not meet thus payments, that late Mr. Erwin A. Stevens loaned the Erie Railroad Company $[illegible] in consideration of which he obtained the right of way for trains, during a certain number of years. This right was assigned to the Morris and Essex corporation, then of limited proportions, but not very powerful and extensive, embracing several branches, including the new route to Boston, and the Delaware and Lackawanna division. The number of their trains has been very largely increased, and, as the Erie authorities allege, cause most of the detention and annoyance experienced in passing through the tunnel, without paying an equivalent toward the expenses. The Erie broad gauge and the Morris and Essex narrow, have both been in use from the river front to the western end of the tunnel at the junction. The latter Company have intended to connect their Boston branch of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad with the third rail through the tunnel, forming the wide gauge track of the Erie Railway, but the Erie officers have always opposed it. Yesterday morning, at about 9 o'clock, some seventy laborers of the Morris and Essex Road arrived at the junction, provided with the necessary tools, and prepared to place a new, large, double frog in position. Their movements were quickly begun, but the telegraph operator in the adjacent round-house promptly dispatched a message to Erie head-quarters, and in about five minutes' time Superintendent BUCKER, Assistant Superintendent BARTMOUR, Detective WILLIAMS and others, came up on an engine, and resisted the track-layers. Neither party proceeded to blows, but they struggled together—the one to prevent, and the other to accomplish the purpose. An Erie locomotive was rushed upon the frog and moved to and fro, to interfere with the track-men's attempts, whereupon they seized a number of broken rails, blocked the wheels, and raised the tender by levers, until the frog was securely spiked to the ties. Several of the blows of the hammers struck the feet of the Erie contestants during the scuffle, but no serious damage was done. Telegraphic orders to all the Erie stations in the vicinity commanded the employes to rally to the spot, and in less than an hour about 1,000 had arrived. The other party were also reinforced to the number of 300. These seemed to be disciplined, and during the day manifested an obedience to their superiors that was in strong contrast with the disorder of the Police Department, which had been summoned en masse, and although a clever body of men, were imperfectly managed by the chief. The approach to the tunnel was crowded with a heterogeneous multitude of employes, passengers, Police, sheriffs and idlers, whom the Captains could not, with their best intentions, separate, without proper concert of action from their commands. The consequence was that at intervals the noise, jostling, confusion and excitement very nearly precipitated a general riot, which would undoubtedly have been of a sanguinary character, as the crowd were well armed with iron bars, hammers and other tools. At 10 o'clock news of the affair had circulated all over the adjoining cities and towns, and a constant stream of people, on foot and by horse-cars and carriages, poured toward the spot; and at noon their numbers had increased to about 4,000. Every hour also brought additional gangs of railroad men to either side, until the track-bed, from the black mouth of the tunnel to the junction, was one seething mass of humanity. The lofty bridge and the sloping hill-side, 100 feet above, were swarming with spectators. Long lines of trains stretched out as far as the eye could reach, over the meadows; the Morris and Essex, and Lackawanna, to the left; the Erie in the centre, and the Northern New-Jersey to the right. Great numbers of passengers—men, women and children—were obliged to get out of the cars in this most barren, desolate and bleak portion of New-Jersey, and clamber over the network of tracks, up the hills, and down the rough roads, nearly three miles, into Jersey. The Erie Company made no provision, by stagecoach otherwise, to transport them, and the hardship to women, children and infirm persons was pitiable in the extreme. At noon, while the Police were guarding the track, and immediately under their eyes, a most successful raid was made by a picked band of Erie men, who dexterously wrenched out the spikes, threw the frog of contention into the ditch, and escaped before the astounded Police could make any arrests. The Morris and Essex employes replaced it, but were not allowed to drive in any spikes.

At another time the Erie men again made a dash, secured their own displaced rail from the ditch, where it had been thrown, and rushed through the crowd with shouts and cries, which were responded to by the thousands around and above, until the echoes were wild with the roar. Bloodshed now seemed inevitable. The team-hands and engine-men seized sticks of wood, hammers, wrenches and bolts; and the laborers grasped shovels, picks and bars, which were brandished in the air with vociferous threats. The Police struggled to beat the surging crowd back, and finally succeeded. The rail was again cast into the ditch. But two arrests were made. During this scene several exciting dialogues occurred between Superintendent SCHOCH, of the Morris and Essex, and BUCKER, of the Erie. The Chief of Police was not visible, and the Captains were late to do their best, seemingly without instructions, and they did well under the circumstances, which were perplexing.

By a compromise between the two Superintendents it was arranged that a certain number of trains should be allowed to proceed in the order of their arrival. Four Erie trains, with some thirty cars, were passed, and some Morris and Essex trains were about to follow, when Mr. BUCKER prevented it. Similar breaches of faith on the Erie side are alleged by Mr. SCHOCH to have occurred during the day. Angry altercations also took place on this point between the parties. Couriers and telegrams were constantly, but no settlement seemed probable. At about noon, JAMES FISK, Jr., with some female companions, was observed in the vicinity, apparently enjoying the proceedings. Subsequently, returned to the Grand Opera-house without effecting any change in the situation. Later in the afternoon, the burly form of the opera bouffe, and Erie proprietor in brass-mounted decorations, vaulted from the high stone wall at the roadside down to the track-level below. He was followed by a staff of initiations, and all mingled in the crowd. Mr. FISK, surrounded by his satellites, approached Mr. SCHOCH, with characteristic bluster and attitude, and demanded that the frog should be removed. The latter courteously but firmly refused. This demand and refusal were repeated. A number of gentlemen named Bergh, near the Erie Colonel and his aids, but nothing was accomplished until about 5 o'clock, when Gov. RANDOLPH arrived, and was immediately buttonholed by Mr. FISK, who argued his case volubly, but with no apparent effect. It was now dark, and the dense mass of people in the vicinity were getting quite demonstrative. The headlights of scores of engines mingled their glare with the misty moonlight, and made up a strange and unnatural effect. The switches were doubly guarded from all unprovoked attack, and a line of sentinels was formed along the adjoining fence.

A cessation of all the parties interested was then held in the round-house. There were present JAMES FISK, Jr., Superintendents BUCKER and BARTMOUR, of the Erie Railway; Superintendent SCHOCH, of the Morris and Essex; Mr. SAMUEL BLOAN and Counselor J. VANSYCKEL of the Delaware and Lackawanna; Mr. SHEPPARD of the Erwin; A. Stevens (acting) Gov. RANDOLPH and others.

After several long demands from Mr. FISK upon Mr. SCHOCH for the removal of the frog, all of which were flatly but firmly refused, the Governor was appealed to and said:

"Mr. Mr. Fisk, there can be no good back in whose things. The existing point must be from the present situation. The frog cannot be removed. You must have the matter arbitrated in the Courts. This affair has already lasted too long. I cannot allow this avenue to be obstructed and the public so inconvenienced. I have made arrangements for additional trains, and shall close these inconveniences of theirs are not removed by you before midnight. It must be done."

Subsequently an agreement was made to leave the track just as it was, allowing all trains to pass, and referring the quarrel to the Courts. The frog was then nailed down in the presence of the principal actors, and the crowd dispersed. The Erie trains moved off amid the cheers of the people, the ringing of bells, and shrieking of whistles. Mr. FISK, with attendants, left the scene with a most clum and crestfallen appearance. Two regiments were under orders last night, and a posse of Sheriffs and guards, the Bergen Brigade, and the Hackensack. During the day the long and depot were a most deserted look. In the afternoon and evening the wildest excitement existed among the thousands of commuters and passengers, who were unable to get home until very late hour in the night, and they denounced the Erie management in bitter terms. The Morris and Essex trains were dispatched from the New-Jersey Central Depot over the Newark track. A number of the commuters declared their determination to remove their residences from the Erie line. A large number of Westward-bound passengers were sadly inconvenienced.

Had not the compromise been effected it was arranged by the United States authorities to arrest the party responsible for a wanton detention of the mails. The pecuniary damage of this affair to all parties would not be covered by $10,000. The Governor has intimated that in the fall any such impotent conclusion will be instantly seize the tunnel in the name of the Common wealth of New-Jersey.

A Tartar Insurrection in Mongolia—Twenty Thousand Insurgents Threatening the Capital.

LONDON, Dec. 1.—A dispatch just received here from Shanghai, dated Nov. 4, says a Tartar insurrection had occurred in Mongolia. Twenty thousand insurgents were threatening the town of Ourga, the capital city of the province. A force armed with Russian rifles had gone to oppose the movement. ANOTHER OIL FIRE.

Roundup of Tanks, Stills, Storage and Other Property—The Fire Still Burning.

TITUSVILLE, Penn., Dec. 3.—About 9 o'clock this evening a large fire broke out at Messrs. CRAWFORD & PICKERING's refinery. One large iron tank, three wooden tanks, stills, cooling house, and a large pump, were entirely destroyed. The tanks containing benzine and tar quickly ignited, bursting with a loud report. The contents, completely covering the creek, floated downward in a burning stream. The fire communicated to two small benzine tanks, about three rods up the creek, owned by Messrs. MORELAND & Co., but the efforts of the employes saved the refinery, &c. There was but a small amount of oil consumed. The firemen are upon the ground and working with a will, playing upon the large tanks in the vicinity.

BRIGHAM YOUNG'S INCOME TAX.

The Income from Mormon Church Property Decided to be Taxable—Brigham Young's Female Grievance.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—In December, 1869, JOHN F. TWEEDALE, Assessor of Internal Revenue for the Territory of Utah, assessed BRIGHAM YOUNG, as trustee for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, an income tax of [illegible] on which he added a penalty of [illegible]. Mr. YOUNG appealed from the assessment, claiming he here is subject to no assessment, making two points against it in giving the Mormon view of the case, first, that the trust fund was raised by tithing, and was a voluntary offering, and consequently not taxable as income. The next point was that if it was taxable they had been relieved by the act of July 14, 1870, giving exemption to every five persons living in religious communities holding property in common. The point of voluntary offering was decided against BRIGHAM YOUNG as trustee, because of the fact that punishments such as excommunication and other sins are meted to those who refuse to pay tithing, which deprives said offerings of all voluntary character.

On the second point, in which they claimed to come within the law exempting common property, it was shown by the Government that the property was not held in common, as required by the terms of the law, which says: "The property from which the income arises, and the income, shall be held jointly and in common."

The matter has been pending in the Internal Revenue Bureau for very nearly one year, and today was decided by Acting Commissioner DOUGLASS, in favor of the Government as to the tax, but relieving YOUNG from the penalty. Instructions will be sent to Collector HALLIWELL in Utah to collect the tax at once.

The Address to the Pope by American Catholics.

The address of the Catholic clergy and laity of the Diocese of New-York, to which we referred in the TIMES of yesterday, is now given in full. It was drawn up by the following committee of clergymen: Fathers HECKER, SEARS, QUINN and PRESTON, and the following sentiment have been requested to act as committee of the laity: CHARLES O'CONOR, JOHN E. DEVELIN, JOHN McKEON, T. JAMES GLOVER, all of the legal profession, to whom Mr. NAVARRO has been added. The address will be read in the various parish churches throughout the Diocese of New-York to-morrow evening. It will be signed by the clergymen and a few prominent representative laymen.

ADDRESS OF THE CLERGY AND LAITY OF THE DIOCESE OF NEW-YORK TO HIS HOLINESS PIUS IX.

MOST HOLY FATHER: The Catholic Clergy of the Diocese of New-York, both secular and regular, together with their faithful people, approach the foot of your Apostolic throne, and offer to your Holiness in the present trying time this avowal of their homage and obedience to the See of Peter, of their filial affection and spiritual allegiance, and devotion to your august person, so inexpressibly dear to them, and of their sympathy with you in the afflictions and sorrows to which you, and in you, the Catholic Church, as the Holy Spouse of our Lord Jesus Christ, are at present subjected by faithless and unworthy members of that Church, whose supreme Pastor you are. With the indignation of honest men, who respect no less the obligation of laws and treaties than the rights of nations and legitimate rulers; with the just and religious abhorrence of Christians who revered the present authority of the Holy See even its temporal domain, we repudiate and condemn the lawless injustice which has invaded your Sentimate dominion as a Sovereign Prince.

We also denounce the sacrilegious violence, by which you are insulted and brought under captivity, the sacred person of your Holiness, the Vicar of Jesus Christ upon earth, and as such entitled by Divine right to complete liberty in the exercise of your sublime office, and of the most perfect of human rights to civil precedence, a necessary consequence and bulwark of that liberty.

We also protest against the invasion of the liberty of the Church in the person of its head, both as an outrage against the sacred prerogative of your Holiness as Supreme Pontiff, and as the violation of a right which we as Catholics possess, of being governed by a chief completely exempted from and independent of all civil authority, for in no other condition could our intercourse with him be free and unrestricted.

In the full sincerity of our loyal and Catholic hearts, we promise to continue faithful to your Holiness, and to the Apostolic See at all times, but especially in perilous times like these, and humble like the humble pupils of the Church. We ask your Holiness to accept the assurance that we will not cease from making every effort in our power to aid and assist you in the maintenance of your just rights, and in the fulfillment of your arduous duties, and that we will continually pray to God with a confidence greatly strengthened by the example which your Holiness has never failed to set before us, that he will deign to give you and the See of Peter another triumph more signal and illustrious than any of the past victories of the Church over the gates of hell and the power of darkness.

Finally, we humbly implore the prayer of your Holiness for steadfastness in the faith, and our clerical salvation, and your Apostolic benediction upon the divine of New-York, and upon each and every one of us, your devoted children.

Timely Comments on the Threatened Eastern Difficulty.

have, would be a foolish nation not to think of raising up some secure boundary-fence between herself and such a neighbor now that she has the chance.

TERRITORIAL REDUCTION.

There is no law of nature that I know of, no Heaven's act of Parliament, whereby France, alone of terrestrial beings, shall not restore any portion of her plundered goods when the owners they were wrenched from have an opportunity upon them. To nobody, except to Frenchmen, is it, for the moment, given to be credible that there is such a law of nature. Alsace and Lorraine were not got, either of them, in so divine a manner as to render that a probability. The cunning of RICHELIEU, the grandiose of Louis XIV., these are the only titles of France to those German possessions. RICHELIEU screwed them loose, (and, by happy accident, there was a TURENNE, as General, got screwed along with them;—TURENNE, I think, was mainly German by blood and temper, had not FRANCIS I. caged in his service, the little Duke of BOUILLON; in the way we saw, and gradually made him French;) Louis is Grand, with his TURENNES as supreme of modern Generals, managed the rest of the operation, except, indeed, I should say, the burning of the Palatinate, from Heidelberg Palace steadily downward, into black ruin, which TURENNE would not do sufficiently, and which LOUIS had to get done by another. There was also a good deal of executive law-practice, what we may fairly call violently sharp attorneyism, put in use. The great Louis' "Chambres de Réunion," Metz Chamber, Brisach Chamber, were once of high infamy, have not completed oblivion in England, and everywhere else beyond the Rhine. The grand Louis (except by sublime gesture, ironically polite, made no answer. He styled himself on his very coins, (ex of 1697, say the medallists,) Roi de France seulement, but it is certain attorneyism of the worst sort was one of his instruments in this conquest of Alsace. Nay, as to Strasbourg, it was not even attorneyism, much less a long-sword, that did the feat; it was a house-breaker's jemmy on the part of the Grand Monarque. Strasbourg was got in time of profound peace by bribing of the Magistrates to do treason, on his part, and admit his garrison one night.—Nor as to Metz in Pucelle, nor any of these Three Bishoprics, was it fixed, or, rather, shaken loose, (yet to fixture; rather it was force of fraudulent pawnbroking,) King HENRI II. (year 1552) got these place—Protestants, applying to him in their extreme need—as we may say, in the way of pledge. HENRI entered there with banners spread and drums beating, "solely in defence of German liberty" (God shall witness!) "and nothing for Protestantism or German liberty. (German liberty managing rapidly to help itself in this instance;) and then, like a brazen-faced, unjust pawnbroker, refused to give the places back—had ancient rights over them, extremely indubitable rights, he said, and could not give them. And never yet, by any pressure or persuasion, would. The great CHARLES V., Protestantism itself now supporting, endeavored, with his utmost energy and to the very cracking of his heart, to compel him, but could not. The present Hohenzollern King, a modest and peaceable man in comparison, could and has. I believe it to be perfectly just, rational, and wise that Germany should take these countries home with her from her unexampled campaign, and, by well fortifying her own old Wasgau, ("Vosges,") Hundsrück, (Dog's-back,) Three Bishoprics, and other military strength, secure herself for all time coming against French visits.

FRANCE'S DISHONOR.

The French complain dreadfully of threatened "loss of honor;" and lamentable hysterics indeed earnestly, "Don't dishonor France; leave poor France's honor bright." But will it save the honor of France to refuse paying for the glass she has voluntarily broken in her neighbor's window, and to shake upon the window was her dishonor. Signally disrespectful to any nation was her late assault on Germany; equally signal has been the ignominy of its execution on the part of France. The honor of France can be saved only by the deep repentance of France, and the serious determination never to do so again—to the reverse of so forever henceforth. In that way may the honor of France again gradually brighten to the height of its old splendor, far beyond the First Napoleonic, much more the Third, or any recent sort, and offer again to our voluntary love and grateful estimation all the fine and graceful qualities nature has implanted in the French. For the present, I must say, France looks more and more delirious, miserable, blameworthy, pitiable, and even contemptible. She refuses to see the facts of her case, lying palpable before her face, and the penalties she has brought upon herself. A France scattered into anarchic ruin, without recognizable head; head, or chief, indistinguishable from foot, or rabble; Munster flying up in balloons—ballasted with Cartouches; but in the meantime, amid tremendous public lies, proclamations of victories that were to be, creatures of the fancy; a Government subsisting altogether on mendacity, willing that horrid bloodshed should continue and increase rather than that they, beautiful republican creatures, should cease to have the guidance of it; I know not when or where there was seen a nation so covering itself with dishonor. If, among this multitude of sympathetic bystanders, France have any true friends, his advice to France would be,—To abandon all that, and never to resume it more. France really ought to know that "refuges of lies" were long ago discovered to lead down only to the gates of death eternal, and to be forbidden to all entrance—that the one hope for France is to recognize the facts which have come to her, and that they came without by invitation of her own; how the—a mass of gilded, proudly-varnished anarchy—has wilfully insulted and defied to mortal duel a neighbor not anarchic, but still in a quietly human, sober and governed state, and has prepared accordingly. Prepared is an array of sanguinary mountebanks versus a Macedonian phalanx must needs do;—all naive illies smitten down into hideous wreck and impotence, testifying to gods and men what extent of rottenness, anarchy and hidden vile mess lay in her. That the inexorable fact is, she was without resources or power of resisting the victorious Germans; and that her wisdom will be to take that fact into her astonished mind, to know that, howsoever hateful, and fact is inexorable, and will have to be complied with—the sooner at the cheaper rate. It will be a hard lesson to the vainglorious France; but France, we hope, has still in it veracity enough to accept fact as an evidently adamantine entity, which will not brook resistance without penalty, and is unalterable by the very gods.

A NATION'S MENDACITY.

The quantity of conscious mendacity that France, official and other, has perpetrated latterly, especially since July last, is something wonderful and fearful. And, alas, perhaps even that is small compared to the self-delusion and unconscious mendacity long prevalent among the French; which is of still fatler and more poisonous quality, though unrecognized for poison. To me, at times, the mournfullest symptom in France is the figure its "men of genius," its highest literary speakers, who should be prophets and seers to it, seem to be at present, and, indeed, for a generation back have been making. It is evidently their belief that new celestial wisdom is radiating out of France upon all the other overshadowed nations; that France is the new Mecca of the universe; and that all this sad, sordid, diabolic, and, in good part, infernal stuff which French literature has been preaching to us for the last fifty years is a veritable new Gospel out of heaven, pregnant with blessedness for all the sons of men. Alas, one does understand that France made her appearance in revolution, uttered her tremendous doom's-voice against the reign of human shams, proclaiming, as with the great Last Trumpet, that shams should be no more. I often call that a celestial-infernal phenomenon—the most memorable in our world for a thousand years, the whole, a transcendant revolt against the devil and his works (since shams are all and sundry of the devil, and poisonous and unendurable to man.) For that we all infinitely love and honor France. And truly all nations are now busy enough adopting France in regard to that! From side to side of the civilized world these lies, in number, nothing noticeable but the whole world in deep and dismally chaotic insurrection against shams, determination to have done with shams coûte que coûte. Indispensable that battle, whatever else be ill done, we may say to all that; for it is the ultimate one to every battle; but, alas, all that is not yet victory; it is but half the battle, and the much easier half. The infinitely harder half, which is the equally or the still more indispensable, is that of achieving, instead of the established shams which were of the devil, the practicable realities which should be veritable and of God. The first half of the battle, I rejoice to see, is now safe, can now never cease except in victory; but the further stage, I also see, must be under better prendency than that of France, or it will forever prove impossible. The German race, not the Gaelic, are now to be protagonist in that immense world-drama; and from them I expect better issues. Worse we cannot well have. France, with a dead-lift effort, now of eighty-one years, has accomplished under this head, for herself or for the world, nothing, or even less—in strict arithmetic, zero with minus quantities. Her prophets prophesy a twin thing; her people rove in darkness and have wandered far astray.

RESOURCE OF THE PRESENT.

Such prophets and such a people—who in the way of deception and self-deception have carried it far! "Given up to strong delusion," as the Scripture says; till at last the lie seems to them the very truth. And now, in their strangling crisis and extreme need, they appear to have no resource but self-deception still, and quasi-Byron gasconade. They do believe it to be heroic. They believe that they are the "Christ of Nations;" an innocent god-like people, suffering for the sins of all nations, with an eye to redeem us all; let us hope that this of the "Christ of Nations" is the ne plus ultra of the thing. I wish they would inquire whether there might not be a "Cartouche of Nations," if they be likely as a "Christ of Nations" in our time! CARTOUCHE had many gallant qualities, was much admired, and much pitied in his sufferings, and had many fine ladies begging locks of his hair while the inexorable, indispensable gibbet was preparing. But in the end there was no salvation for CARTOUCHE. Better he should obey the heavy-handed Teutsch Police officer, who has him by the wind-pipe in such frightful manner; give up part of his stolen goods, altogether cease to be a Cartouche, and try to become again a Chevalier Bayard under improved conditions, and a blessing and beautiful benefit to all his neighbors, instead of too much the reverse, as now! Clear it is, at any rate, singular as it may seem to France, all Europe does not come to her rescue, in gratitude for the heavenly "mission" it is getting from France! Let would all Europe, if it did, at this moment prevent that awful Chancellor from having his own way. Metz and the boundary-fence, I spoken, will be dreadfully hard to get out of that Chancellor's hands again.

ENGLAND IN THE PAST.

A hundred years ago there was in England the livelliest desire, and at one time an actual effort and hope, to recover Alsace and Lorraine from the French. Lord CHATHAM, called afterward Lord GRANVILLE, (the ancestor, in any sense, of his now honorable synonym,) thought by some to be, with the one exception of Lord CHATHAM, the wisest Foreign Secretary we ever had, and especially the "one Secretary that ever spoke German or understood German matters at all." He had set his heart on this VERY object, and had fair prospects of achieving it, had not our poor dear Duke of NEWCASTLE suddenly meddled him out of it, and even out of office altogether, into exile, claret, (and too much of wine withal, says WALPOLE,) and into total oblivion by his nation, which, except CHATHAM, has none such to remember. That BISMARCK, and Germany along with him, should now at this propitious juncture make a like demand, is no surprise to me. After such provocation, and after such a victory, the resolution does not seem, at least, and even modest. And considering all that has occurred, since that memorable catastrophe at Sedan, I could reckon it creditable to the sense and moderation of Count BISMARCK that he stands steadily by this, demanding nothing more, resolute to take nothing less, and advancing with a slow, calmness forward to it by the eligibles roads. The "Siege of Paris" which looks like the hugest and most hideous farce-tragedy ever played under this sun, BISMARCK evidently hopes will never need to come to utermost bombardment, to millions-fold death by hunger, or the kindling of Paris and its carpentries and asphalt streets by shells and red-hot balls into a sea of fire. Diligent, day by day, seem those Prussians, from marshal down to drummer-boy, well versed in the proverb, "Slow fire makes sweet malt." I believe BISMARCK will get his Alsace and what he wants of Lorraine; and likewise that it will do him, and us, and all the world, and even France itself by and by, a great deal of good. Alsatic France gets her first stern lesson there; is terribly drastic dose of physic to sick France!) and well will it be for her if she can learn her lesson honestly. If she cannot, she will get another, and even another; learnt the lesson must be.

HERR VON BISMARCK.

Considerable misconception as to Herr VON BISMARCK is still prevalent in England. The English newspapers, nearly all of them, seem to me to be only getting toward a true knowledge of the man. BISMARCK, has not yet got to it. The standing likeness, circulating everywhere for years ago, of demented BISMARCK and his ditto King of STRALSUND and CHARLES I. versus our Long Parliament (as like as a Sweden to Monmouth, and not likely) has now vanished from the minds of all who know it even in a small degree. That pathetic Niobe of Denmark, raft violently of her children, (which were stolen children, and were dreadfully ill-fitted by Niobe Denmark,) is also nearly gone, and will go altogether so soon as knowledge of the matter is had. BISMARCK, as I read him, is not a person of Napoleonic ideas quite superior to Napoleon; shows no invincible "lust of territory," nor is tormented with "vulgar ambition," &c., but has aims very far beyond that sphere, and, in fact, seems to me to be striving with strong fealty, by patient, grand and successful steps, toward an object beneficial to Germany and to all other men. That noble, patient, deep, pious, and solid Germany should be at length welded into a nation and become Queen of the Continent, instead of vaporing, vain-glorious, contentious, quarrelsome, restless and overpowerfully Frenchified, seems to me the hopefullest public fact that has occurred in my time.

I remain, Sir, yours truly, T. CARLYLE.

CHELSEA, Nov. 11.

RUSSIA AND EUROPE.

MR. MILL on the Treaty of 1856.

MR. JOHN STUART MILL writes thus to the editor of the London Times: Without wishing, at least for the present, to discuss the character of the declaration just made by the Russian Government—a discussion which would raise questions, both moral and political, more intricate and difficult than people seem to be aware of—may I hope from your impartiality that you will allow expression to be given through your columns to the opinion of at least one Englishman, which he believes to be shared by millions of his countrymen, that for England to let herself be drawn into war by this provocation or on this account would be nothing less than monstrous.

This is not the doctrine of a partisan of peace at any price. Had we, at the first breaking out of the present hateful war, declared that whichever nation first invaded the territory of the other should have England also for its foe, we should, at an extremely small risk to ourselves, in all human probability, have prevented the war, and perhaps given commencement to a new era in the settlement of international differences. To effect this great good to humanity and to public morals, we did not choose to incur the mere chance of being involved in war, and in my opinion we were wrong, and have exposed ourselves to the just recriminations of the suffering people—I do not speak of the Governments—of Germany and France. Were we now to plunge into a war infinitely more dangerous to ourselves, and for which, if we are materially speaking totally unprepared, those among us who are the causes of our so doing will, in my judgment, deserve and receive the execration of the people of England.

The honor of England is not concerned either in the protection of Turkey or the humiliation of Russia. Treaties are not made to be eternal, and before you go to war for the maintenance of one, it behooves the nation, at least, to consider whether it would enter into it afresh at the present day. We should have learned little, indeed, from the spectacle that has been going on before our eyes during the last four months if we allow our journalists to hurry us into a war under the plea of honor, merely because of the manner or the form in which Russia has thought fit to throw off an obligation the substance of which, we all admit, we ought to be ready to reconsider. I am, &c., J. S. MILL.

Views of Mr. J. A. Froude.

Mr. FROUDE writes: With the threat hanging over us of a second war with Russia, every one, however insignificant, is entitled to say what he thinks to arrest so frightful a calamity. How frightful such a war would be is as yet inadequately realized. The Alabama question remains unsettled. In the present state of feeling in the United States, there is not the slightest doubt that privateers under the Russian flag will be fitted out in American harbors. The Government at Washington would be unable to prevent it if they wished, and war with America will be the immediate consequence. Is this a thing to risk?

I do not defend Prince GORTSCHAKOFF's note. The manner of it is as studiously offensive that it looks as if Russia had calculated the chances, and desired either publicity to humiliate us or to provoke a collision. Great nations, however, have no right to appeal to the ordeal of battle for a fault of manner, and the offence as yet has proceeded no further.

Is it too late to reconsider the entire attitude which we have assumed toward Russia? I was one of those who deplored the Crimean war itself as a mistake, if it was nothing worse. Russia and England are the two great civilizing Powers in the East. Our mission is the same, to carry order and peace among races who are incapable of governing themselves. I believed that the overtures of the Emperor NICHOLAS to Sir HAMMONDS SEYMOUR ought to have been met in a less jealous spirit; that England should rather have accepted Russia's hand, and have preferred conciliation and co-operation to distrust and hostility.

Even now in our present difficulty would not a change of front be possible without undue sacrifice of dignity? So far the present war has been localized, and we have taken credit to ourselves for preventing the spread of it. Surely we ought to hesitate before we give the signal, in resentment at an affront to ourselves, for a struggle which will envelop the world, and inflict misery on the entire human race which the wildest imagination would probably under-estimate.

Your obedient servant, J. A. FROUDE.

Brilliant Jewish Wedding on Staten Island.

One of the most brilliant weddings held on Staten Island for many years was that of Miss DEBORAH WEINER and Mr. BERNHARD NATHAN, which took place a few days ago. The bride is daughter of a Mr. MARTIN WEINER, of Tompkinsville, and the bridegroom is a connection of the WEINER family, and an extensive merchant in San Francisco, Cal. The Pavilion Hotel, which had been closed for the season, was engaged for the occasion, and from an early hour in the afternoon till late the next morning its parlors were thronged by ladies and gentlemen well known in New-York, Brooklyn and the island itself, with a few guests from "over the Plains." A special steamer, chartered for the purpose, brought down, about 5 o'clock, a number of the invited from New-York and Brooklyn, and very soon after the marriage ceremony commenced.

The canopy usual on such occasions was opened in the grand hall of the hotel, and beneath it Rev. Dr. ISAACS, of the synagogue, performed the ceremony in a manner which commanded the respect of all present, especially when, after the breaking of the glass, he said: "When these particles are reunited may you be separated." TWYFORD'S band then played, in very good arrangement, MENDELSSOHN'S "Wedding March," and this ended the ceremony.

After a short delay an adjournment was ordered to the dining-room of the hotel, where a splendid banquet was prepared, and done justice to by those who sat at the table, and who were in numbers at least 200. Mr. HINCHMAN, Metropolitan Agent of the Associated Press, presided, and did his duties in an admirable manner—in making a good dinner for himself, and proposing the toasts usual on such occasions. At the right of Mr. HINCHMAN, of the Associated Press Telegraph Company, at the left Mr. W. H. TUMBRIDGE, agent of the Associated Press. Among the other guests were H. W. JOHNSON, Counsel to the Quarantine Commissioners; Captain ——, of the Police, and lady; Dr. J. C. CARNOGHAN and lady; Capt. O'BOYKEN, of Lower Quarantine, and lady; Mr. J. HOLLAND, of the Telegraph Department; Dr. FRYE, of Brooklyn, and lady; Dr. KENNETH REID; Mr. LEWIS, of Vanderbilt Landing; Mr. MARTIN WEINER and lady, parents of the bride; L. LEVY, DAVID and GABRIEL JACOBS, (bro's to the groom,) array of friends from the Cities of New-York and Brooklyn. County Coroner DEMPSEY attended to the carriage department, and preserved excellent order among the Jehus. At 9 o'clock dancing commenced, and was continued until an early hour, when those who lived on the island placed themselves under DEMPSEY's charge, and those hailing from Manhattan Island and the City of Churches were provided by Mr. WEINER with a special steamer, that landed some at the Battery and others at Twelfth-street. The bride and bridegroom left early for the Metropolitan Hotel, New-York, and by 4 o'clock in the morning the Pavilion was deserted, and one of the most pleasant occasions on Staten Island was over.

NEW-YORK CITY.

Opinion of Our City Government in London—Sympathy with the Efforts for Reform.

From the Herald, Nov. 18.

If we may trust the statements of two or three American journals, and notably of the NEW-YORK TIMES, an effort is being made to reform the Government of this City, which deserves the attention of English politicians. The administration of that great community—an administration extending far beyond what we in England understand by municipal power—is, as most of our readers know, singularly and exceptionally bad. Though elected nominally by manhood suffrage, the Government of New-York has fallen practically into the hands of a knot of politicians and gamblers, by no means numerous, who tax and administer it at their own discretion, and for their own advantage. That is not a phenomenon without precedent in Europe. Ignorance, silence and cowardice repeatedly controlled the action and wasted the resources of great States; but in Europe those cliques have always offered their dupes certain returns. Either they granted "liberty" in some unusual form, as the "Fazy" clique did in Geneva; or they secured honor and respect abroad, as the Bonapartists professed to do in France; or they obtained security for property, as the "regular" absolutisms usually do everywhere; or they gave in the great region outside politics cheap and lenient government, as the Neapolitan Bourbons used to do. The strange fact about New-York is that the City Government, which seems so firmly fixed upon its shoulders, though perfectly despotic—that is, independent of the citizens' will—does not apparently secure any of those things. It is not cheap but dear. The taxation represented in some semi-official pamphlet to Parliament to the incredible height of 23 per head per annum, is undoubtedly excessively heavy, and for it the citizens receive little or no return. The ordinary municipal work—paving, lighting, sweeping, &c.—is very badly done, is a subject of constant complaint, and is never properly defended; while the work of defending those who have against those who have not, is not done at all. Thieves and swindlers pass unpunished by connivance of the Judges. No honor whatever is secured for the City by its municipal administration; on the contrary, the contrary point it, and the grand proof that democracy always becomes corrupt, and Americans never defend it except by saying that its governing Democracy is foreign, and not American, while most of them denounce the City as the "cesspool of the Union." As to security, there is less of it than in any city of the Union, except, perhaps, Chicago. Nowhere are crimes against property so lightly punished or so rife. Burglary, theft, and even murder, are incessant; while swindling, if practiced on a large scale, is protected by the Courts, encouraged by the Legislature, and winked at by the greater portion of the Press. A notorious swindler, of the very worst possible character in every other respect, virtually governs New-York, and though decent citizens will not associate with him, decent politicians are not ashamed to serve as his tools. It is not an exaggerated statement of the grievances of all this wickedness, the City Government sets at defiance not only the laws of morality, but the dearest prejudices of those who give it power to be defiant. If there is one prejudice dear to the New-York mind, it is against State endowments of religion. If there is one prejudice dear to the American mind, it is against the Roman Catholic Church with very considerable funds. In his pamphlet on the subject, it is as certain as anything can be, that the City Government has, under pretexts of certain votes for poor schools, nominally renewable every year, but never refused, or likely to be refused, endowed the Catholic Church with very considerable funds, to be applied to the purposes of the religious ruling ecclesiastics belonging to that body. An utterly corrupt municipality, in fact, expends excessive taxes in a ruinously wasteful manner upon objects which the bulk of the community cordially dislike, to the neglect of objects for which they ardently desire, and, to do it under a suspicion of conniving at corrupt gains in which the electorate itself does not consciously share.

This is a strange result of freedom, so strange that we do not wonder observers are often driven to equally strange interpretations—such, for instance, as that of Mr. DE TOCQUEVILLE, who thinks that the Government of New-York is a machine organized for Catholic purposes, a corrupt system based upon religious fanaticism, an interpretation intelligible enough, if in accordance with the evidence, but scarcely a fair one, when the Protestant creed is that of a minority. Others affirm that the "whole evil is traceable to "the foreign element" though there is no reason whatever why the native element, which is supreme in the State, should yield to the foreign element, which is only supreme in the City; while a third party attributes it all to the spirit of money-getting, though if anything is clear in this world, it is that money-getters must of necessity prefer light taxes, security and quiet, to heavy taxes and a constant liability to plunder. We are not concerned just now to engage in that speculation, but we note the rise of a spirit of resistance, and describe the weapons to which it has had recourse.

There seems to be little doubt that the respectable citizens of New-York are very weary of the present state of affairs, and that, headed by some moderate Republicans, and supported by many moderate Democrats, they have made a first effort to shake off the yoke, by striking at its source the hold which certain successful swindlers of all kinds have acquired over the electorate. This, the marked peculiarity of all American wickedness, is, we believe, a temporary one, and arises from accidental circumstance—the thorough comprehension by the aristocracy of crime there of a great truth, that men in earnest about politics will forgive anything to valuable political allies. The fact is not creditable perhaps to the Democrats, but it is not nevertheless, and as true in Europe as America, though the result is somewhat different. Churches, for instance, constantly accept the aid of disbelievers or immoral persons to secure the end they desire, and this, although conscious that those persons are sacrificing objects which their creed has would most earnestly deprecate. The reformers, aware that the electorate is cajoled, and that but for its support corruption could not continue, have made a desperate effort to release it from entanglements; and to this end have appealed to a force, seldom visible in Democracies—the Federal power and the power of religion. The Federal Government has been indeed to pass a law for the protection of the ballot-boxes, as a measure necessary to secure the Republican institutions guaranteed by the Constitution to the States, and the law is to be made by the employment, or menace of employment of State troops. The object of this measure is to prevent the falsification of the returns, to secure genuine freedom to the electors, who, thus enfranchised, are expected to vote honestly, not because the corrupt rulers err in political ideas, but because they are men who, wrong or right in politics, are persons whose characters will not bear the slightest examination, men whom it is a disgrace for respectable Christian citizens to follow. The pulpit has been invoked and responded. We have glanced over hundreds of columns of sermons, in which the Republican party is not indeed denounced, but as wicked persons, whom it is impossible to elect without moral wrong-doing, who ought to be expelled the community, not for their opinions, but for their lives. It is clearly the idea of the reformers that the majority of electors are decent persons, of average wish to do right, who, if once aware of the lives led by the corrupt party leaders, would, politics notwithstanding, desert them, and either vote against them or stay away from the polls.

This project has this time failed; but that it should have been entertained is a noteworthy fact, serving to show that even in New-York, shrewd politicians, acquainted with the people, believe that they are rather deluded than corrupt, that they really do not hear or do not believe the charges against their leaders. We can easily believe this possible. The electorate in a City so vast can know little of the character of candidates except through the Press, and though the Press is frank enough, it has hitherto been distrusted. It has employed slander as a weapon, until the most serious charges are disregarded and disbelieved. Its attacks, however, have now become definite, and serious, and, being indorsed by the clergy, are beginning to be believed to such an extent that at the recent election the Ring, though victorious, achieved its victory by means which deprived it of much of the advantages of success. The electors are waking up, and if the process continues it will next year be impossible for the present rulers of the City either to deceive voters or to manufacture votes. The silent majority which so seldom appears at the polls will, it is believed, expel them, not for their acts, but for their characters, and insist, in the first place, on the election of men untainted with connection with those who have done the work of which, at least, in the calculation, that was lady of conscience not connive, but only blunder, that she suffers itself can be made to justify the suffrage, and it is one of which all observers should be careful to note. If it is correct, there is more hope for the City of New-York than its own most respectable inhabitants are tempted to believe.

CIVIL SERVICE REFORM.

What is to in the Departments at Washington—Exaggerated Idea of Results in the Interior Department—The Present and Coming Examination System of Examiners—Results in the Treasury—Reform in the War Department.

From Our Own Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Tuesday, Nov. 29, 1870.

So much has been said about civil service reform, especially in the Interior Department, that a careful inquiry into what has been accomplished is instructive and interesting. Such inquiry reveals the fact that while a very creditable beginning has been made, not only in the Interior, but in the Treasury and other Departments, the matter has been very greatly exaggerated, especially by some indiscreet partisans of the late Secretary of the Interior, who, in their efforts to injure the President, have persistently represented that he was engaged in a civil service reform in his department in which he was not countenanced by the President. The truth is, that in but two of the five Bureaus of the Interior Department has anything like the reform in question been carried out, and in those two Bureaus, (Patents and Census,) its enforcement, while meeting the earnest sympathy and approval of Secretary COX, is mainly due to the energy and ability of their respective chiefs, Commissioners FISHER and WALKER. And the President, not less than Secretary COX, has heartily approved these efforts.

ORIGIN OF COMPETITIVE EXAMINATIONS.

Competitive examinations of applicants for appointment to positions in civil service originated in that Patent Office, somewhat more than a year ago. It is substantially true to say that there have been no competitive examinations in any other office, though there have been some examinations called competitive. Hon. S. S. FISHER, late Commissioner of Patents, in his annual report for the year 1868, speaks of the considerations which led him to the adoption of competitive examinations of applicants for office, and gives the result of two. So far as any record exists, and so far as inquiry among those conversant with the facts at the time revealed, the measure was Mr. FISHER's, and the credit of instituting it belongs to him. It was approved by Mr. COX, after its utility had been demonstrated. Early in the Summer of 1869 two vacancies occurred in the Board of Second Assistant Examiners. There are a large number of Examiners' clerks, whose duties make them familiar with the work of the office, from whom the vacancies were to be filled. Before the two vacant positions were filled, two more occurred. The first question that arose was who should be selected for promotion, and to decide the choice the Commissioner proposed a competitive examination of all who desired, and the selection of those who thus proved themselves best qualified. Seventeen candidates were examined. A series of questions were prepared to test, not their fitness to teach a country school, but their knowledge of the duties of the place to which they aspired. The questions were prepared by the three gentlemen whom the Commissioner requested to take charge of the examination, and whose instructions, given verbally, were to "peg it to them. It is not as if they were a set of poor devils who would lose their places if they didn't pass." The examination, so far as the Board was concerned, was entirely impersonal. One hundred questions were given in writing, requiring written answers. The answer to each question was rated separately in the scale of one hundred for perfection, and the sum of the values given to all the answers showed the percentage which each candidate had attained. Of course the four having the highest percentage were adjudged the successful competitors. In the Patent Office several such examinations have been made. They have been conducted by men of well-known ability, they have been competitive, they have been fair and thorough. The good effects of them have been evident. The organization of the Patent Office is well adapted to them, and they meet fairly its peculiar need of special qualifications. The credit of their origin, it is almost needless to say, belongs entirely to Commissioner FISHER.

IN THE CENSUS BUREAU.

In the other Bureaus of the Interior Department the examination of applicants continued as it had been for years, merely pro forma, and after the appointment had been to all intents decided. When the Census Bureau was organized, however, it became convenient to change the mode of conducting examinations. Because several applicants were examined together, some of whom might be rejected and some set down for appointment, the examinations have been called "competitive;" at least it is difficult to find any other reason for the use of the term "competitive" in connection with them. The necessity of a rapid organization of the Census Bureau prevented a competitive trial of applicants; but examination before appointment was both needful and required by law. A system was devised which met the exigencies of the case, perhaps, as well as any other; but to call it "competitive" is a misnomer. The examinations resembled those of the Patent Office only in being as far as possible impersonal. In the beginning a series of thirty-five questions were prepared, and a perfect answer to each was given a certain amount, varying with the importance of the question, the sum of all the values being 1,000. It was determined, as a rule, that all who received for credit marks, be they were called, 450 or above, should be set down for appointment. All who failed to reach 400 were rejected. In the case of those whose marks were between 400 and 450, the appointment was left to be determined by reasons of a personal nature, as, for instance, if a young man came from the Far West, and was found among this class, he was not to be rejected on that account. Secretary COX ultimately found "reasons" for appointing all of this class, which he puts down in his report as sixty-two in number. The same report is authority for the statement that "631 persons were examined; of these 230 were successful." But they were not successful by reason of any competition at all. Applicants were examined in small numbers, in some cases one, two or three at a time, and all those who attained a certain fixed and arbitrary standard received appointments. It was trotting a horse not against Dexter, but against Dexter's time,—quite another thing. Nearly 200 of these "successful" 230 were examined on a series of questions, thirty-five in number. Twelve of the questions were in rules of arithmetic with which a Census Office clerk would have to deal daily, and yet the scale of credit marks was so arranged that a person might receive some hundreds above the minimum necessary to secure him an appointment without answering one of them. A few specimens must serve to exhibit the importance of the remaining questions. "On what principle does the balloon operate?" "When was the art of printing discovered, and where?" "What is the centre of a circle?" are questions that appear in one series. A number of other applicants were required to tell if they knew "What is substance; were the resolutions of '98?" "When did the Hartford Convention meet?" "When and by whom was steam first discovered?" an answer to which would certainly interest the world generally as well as the Census Office. Another more unfortunate question, whose answer must immediately reveal whether the applicant belonged to a certain religious denomination or not, was the following: "What was the origin of the present established Church of England?" It is due to Gen. WALKER, the excellent and efficient chief of the Census Bureau, to say that, under his direction, the series of questions was long since radically changed. They are now twenty-two in number, and all of them entirely appropriate. Sixteen are arithmetical. It ought also to be remarked that the examination sifted out a certain amount of chaff; doubtless, there was nothing done by an examination in the same manner before.

IN OTHER BUREAUS.

Up to July last, during a year and four months' administration, Secretary COX made no effort to reform the service of the Indian, Land and Pension Offices of his Department, either by competitive examinations or by increasing the stringency of the merely formal ones in vogue. Under date of July 7, the order was promulgated for competitive examination throughout the Department. In the order occurs a plain violation of the law of 1871, which it quotes. The following is the order which was sent to the Commissioner of Indian Affairs, the Commissioner of the General Land Office, the Commissioner of Patents, and the Commissioner of Pensions:

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
WASHINGTON, D. C., July 7, 1870.

SIR: In order to increase the efficiency of the clerical force of this Department, and to elevate the standard, I have determined in future appointments to establish the system of competitive examinations, to consist of questions touching matters relating to the Bureau to which the persons are designated, together with a general examination in arithmetic, history, geography and correspondence.

The examinations will be conducted in writing, and each person will attach to his papers an assumed name, in order to relieve the examiner from any charge of favoritism or prejudice. The real name will be a written on a hope-seal paper, and kept together with the assumed name, in an envelope, which will be sealed, and not opened until the standard of the applicant under his assumed name shall have been determined.

The minimum standard will be 1,000 and the maximum 450, which latter number must be attained to secure an appointment.

The question, together with the letter of the applicant, will have a certain power in the scale, to be determined by the Examiners, and the sum of all these powers will equal the maximum number, viz.: 1,000.

The act of March 3, 1853, (10th Stat., page 211,) requires that the Board of Examiners shall consist of the Chief of the Bureau or office in which the appointment is to be made, together with two others to be selected by the head of the Department.

I desire that you will select and report to me the name of some gentleman in your office who is thoroughly competent, from knowledge of the work of your office, and on general subjects, to act in connection with yourself and some one to be hereafter selected to represent the Department proper.

Whenever vacancies occur the Secretary will issue designations to a class for examination, and the person passing best in the scale will receive the appointment.

From the experience of the Census Office, I am satisfied that this system is strictly adhered to from the class of persons who apply for office, only those will be selected who are thoroughly competent, and that the transaction of the public business and the prompt and efficient discharge of duty will be greatly enhanced.

Very respectfully, J. D. COX, Secretary.

The law quoted required the appointment of two persons by the head of the Department on the Examining Board. The Secretary proposed to appoint but one, leaving the other to the head of the Bureau. In fact he never appointed one, but verbally requested a young man in the office to look after the examinations, who generally did so, though sometimes sending another young man for a substitute. It appears that the Secretary never gave any further attention to the matter, not even to see whether his order was executed in good faith. In fact there never was a competitive examination under it. Seven or eight applicants were examined at one time in the Pension Office, but all of them were needed, and all were appointed, who, by any decent liberality of marking, could be brought up to 450. In other instances, one or two only were examined at once, and appointed or rejected according as the minimum standing was, or was not, reached. Either from hostility to the measure, or from incompetency of those designated as examiners, (for which the Secretary must be responsible,) the examination in every case was a perfect farce. Only a few of the questions propounded have any bearing upon the duties of the office, or subjects connected with them. The remainder of the questions might do well enough for boys in the intermediate school, but even there would produce some merriment. It is worthy of notice that the Secretary makes no mention of the really excellent method in operation in the Patent Office. In the Patent Office no reference has been had to the order, and the examinations since its issue have been conducted as before. One of the examiners at least did not know till Saturday last that such an order had been given.

REFORMS IN THE TREASURY DEPARTMENT.

In the Treasury Department, a quiet but effective reform in the clerical service, so far as examinations are concerned, has been in progress since July, when Secretary BOUTWELL issued the following order:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, July 20, 1870.

It is ordered that from and after this date, the Board of Examiners provided for by the third section of the act of Congress, approved March 3, 1853, will be constituted as follows:

The Chief of the Bureau to which the clerk is assigned, the Chief Clerk of the Department, and E. E. ELLIOTT, Esq., of the Office of the Secretary of the Treasury.

Examinations not be in writing, and must show the process by which solutions or conclusions are reached. All papers to be submitted with report of the Board of Examiners, and filed in the Appointment Division of this office.

GEORGE S. BOUTWELL,
Secretary of the Treasury.

This order was issued because the Secretary became aware that examinations had become a lifeless routine. In compliance with the law, he names two officers to act as permanent members of the Board on behalf of the Department proper, The chief clerk, Mr. SAVILLE, and Mr. ELLIOTT, chief clerk of the Bureau of Statistics, have given earnest attention to the subject. They were emphatically assured by the Secretary that he desired thorough work. And lest any one should remark upon the date of this order, let it be stated here that Secretary BOUTWELL was not informed of the issue of the order of Secretary COX till one day last week. The Departments have taken independent action in the matter, and there has been no spirit of rivalry, at least on the part of the Treasury. The permanent members of the Board prepared a schedule as a guide for the examination of applicants. The schedule contains only the list of subjects; but a list of questions, applicable to each subject, has been prepared for the private use of the examiners, and from which they select at pleasure in any particular case. The schedule presents the following outline of subjects: Name, residence, place and date of birth; elementary education—mathematics, book-keeping, languages, &c.; special acquaintance with business, art, or science; clerical experience generally; clerical experience (if any) in the service of the Government; example illustrating the class of accounts, computations, or work in which lately engaged; questions in notation, numeration, addition, subtraction, multiplication, and division of whole numbers and fractions, decimal and common, in interest and discount; questions pertaining to the conversion of domestic and foreign currencies to United States weights and measures, common and metrical; and to book-keeping—practical application of the above; questions in grammar, orthography, geography, history, government and law, and correspondence. The examinations are not impersonal. However, from the character of the men who conduct them, they are above any suspicion of partiality. The applicant finds a kindly personal interest taken in him, and is encouraged to show what he can do, rather than discouraged and puzzled. The rejection of applicants is frequent, which shows that the examinations have spirit as well as form. A written report is made to the Secretary, signed by each member of the Board, and in case of disagreement among them, that fact is indicated. A special feature of the examination is testing the applicant's familiarity with the business in which he has been previously engaged, the reason being given that a man who has acquired a competent knowledge of one business can probably learn another, provided his general education otherwise is adequate. Candidates for promotion are also examined in every instance.

In all this there is much tending toward real civil service reform; it is perfectly safe to say that the clerical service of no other Department comprises so much special learning and qualification as the Treasury, and the effect of Secretary BOUTWELL's efforts will elevate the standard.

IN THE WAR DEPARTMENT.

A very effective method of civil service reform has also been quietly enforced in the War Department. The peculiar system of clerical service in that Department rendered this a delicate and difficult matter, the larger portion of the clerks being men who had rendered efficient service in the army. While some chiefs of division were graduates of West Point, The reform introduced had been contemplated in succession by STANTON, BROWNFIELD and RAWLINS, but they never got to the points of enforcing it. The necessity for it confronted Gen. BELKNAP at an early day, and in September last he appointed a Board which examined every division in the Department, and reported upon the efficiency of the clerks in charge of the same, which

NINTH WARD NUISANCES.

Plaster Factories and Oyster-Shell Burning Nuisances Discussed and Dealt. The Sanitary Commission Hunting Them Up.

Yesterday the Sanitary Commission made a tour among the oyster lime-burners and calcine plaster factories of the west side of the City. Complaints, numerous and pressing, have been made against those places by residents in their neighborhood, and by various pretexts and problems of amendment in the conduct of their business, they have been allowed to continue from month to month and year to year. But from present appearances, the only improvement that can be made permanent is the radical one to drive them from the midst of such populous datasets altogether.

The first place visited, yesterday, was G. ISAAC's plaster manufactory, No. 21 to 25 Bethune-street. To appreciate the nuisance we must understand something of the character of the business. Stone of gypsum from mines and quarries in Nova Scotia, are annually imported, sent to these factories, dried, ground, mixed with other mineral or chemical compounds and made into calcined plaster and barreled, and then sent out all over the country for various purposes. The refuse is used for agricultural purposes. In the grinding process a thin, almost invisible dust is created, which, for the greater protection of the persons engaged in the manufacture, is permitted to escape through windows and doors and every other avenue that it can find. It is consequently wafted hither and thither with every breeze, and enters the windows and doors of every house within a quarter or half mile of it on any side. The rear walls of some of the tenements and private houses around which were noticed, had a coating of this dust, one-eighth or one-quarter of an inch thick, and the Health Inspectors in their report that the hottest days in Summer the people have to keep the back windows of their houses closed to escape the lung-destroying and furniture-marring nuisance. The factory of KING BROTHERS, on the corner of West and Horatio streets, appeared to be less offensive, partly because the building is more substantial than the other. Still it is next to impossible for a person long to breathe this dust and remain healthy.

WOTHERSPOON BROTHERS' factory, No. 428 West Thirteenth-street, runs along the rear of four five-story tenement houses, and entered through an archway in the midst of them. They make no sanitary defence of their place, but on the ground of their large business in which they have $130,000 invested, they have applied for a permit to continue under a promise that if proper means be adopted they will reduce to some less offensive neighborhood. They have been established forty-one years, but the nuisance was just as great here as elsewhere, and the owners of the tenements are obliged to reduce their rents very greatly to obtain occupants for their places at all. And these poor people risk their lives for the sake of saving a few dollars a month in rent. On the opposite side of the street stands Ferguson's foundry, which has also been indicted by the Board of Health as a nuisance, not because of any smells arising therefrom, but because of the sparks emanating from low chimneys, by which many have burned and disfigured, more or less, every blind and shutter of the tenement-houses in front. They keep the tenants continually alive to danger; still they have apparently no means of averting it. When the sparks do not burn them the smoke blinds them, and between the two the poor have a hard and dangerous to live. The owner or lessee of the tenements and of the foundry have been repeatedly notified to remedy this condition of things, and they say they have tried, but if so, they evidently will have to try again.

The only oyster lime-burning kiln on the west side of town are those of P. MALONY, at No. 202 West Twelfth-street. The smell was plainly discernible yesterday at Jane and Bleecker streets. Six beds of shells are kept continually burning, day and night, Sundays and week days the same. As every oyster-dealer knows, and every one who has seen an oyster-house knows, there are hundreds of bad oysters that are thrown, flesh and all, into the heaps, and what with the decomposition by the sun and by the fires, this animal or fish matter sends out its intolerable odor throughout the vicinity. Every tenement around that was noticed by the Commissioners yesterday had its windows tightly closed, and according to the inspectors they are and must be always closed to escape at all. These facts will be reported to the Board of Health at its next meeting, and an order to quit at a specified time will probably be made. There is no other resource left.

Kings County Board of Supervisors—How the People's Money is Spent.

The Kings County Board of Supervisors held a meeting, yesterday afternoon, and resolved, after much debate, upon the reception of the report of the Committee appointed to investigate the Lowber insurance job, to have the policies on the county buildings stand in the Companies that now hold them. The report, while it exonerated Mr. Lowber, the insurance agent of the county, from anything like personal motives in desiring to make the transfer, took ground against the making of any change at the present time.

The Finance Committee presented certain small bills, in all amounting to about $6,000, for the approval of the Board, which was given. Before doing so, however, Supervisor HARMAN took the floor and denounced the bills presented as fraudulent, and moved that they be referred to the Law Committee for investigation. That motion, however, was lost. The following few figures, taken from the bills in question, will give some idea of how the money of the county is spent:

9 dozen brooms, $9 per dozen	$81 00
271 pails of blacking	1,016 25
8 gross oil cans	57 00
28 dozen scrubbing-brushes	134 00
15 pieces of matting	171 30
14 barrels of coffee	140 00
24 dozen tin cups	72 00
24 dozen tin pails	147 00
14 dozen white-wash brushes	120 00

Mr. HARMAN asserted that the broom could be purchased for $27, the blankets for $225, the tinning for $15, the matcher for $12, the scrubbing-brushes for $60, and so on to the end of the list. It is only necessary to add that the Supervisor was laughed at for his pains, and the bills rushed through. The Board then adjourned.

Freight and Passenger Rates on Rival Railroad Lines Proposed to be Made Uniform.

For two days past the Presidents of the leading railroads have been in secret session at the St. Nicholas Hotel, for the purpose of agreeing, if possible, upon uniform rates between rival lines, on passenger and freight traffic. Among those present were the following representatives of the trunk lines: THOMAS A. SCOTT, of the Pennsylvania Central; JAY GOULD, of the Erie; CORNELIUS VANDERBILT, of the New-York Central; J. T. JOY, of the Burlington & Quincy Railroad; A. BOODEY, Toledo, Wabash & Western Railroad; H. T. CLARK, of the Lake Shore line; J. N. MCCULLOCH, of the Fort Wayne and Chicago; and OSCAR TOWNSEND, of the Cleveland and Columbus. No decision has as yet been announced as the deliberations will be resumed to-day.

The Sequel to a Target Excursion—Arrest of a Barber who Received a Counterfeit $20 Bill as a Prize.

Commissioner SHIELDS heard testimony, yesterday, in the case of PHILIP CARRELL, a young barber, charged with passing a counterfeit $20 bill on ELIAS MORRIS, of No. 408 Canal-street, in payment for a pea-jacket, worth $6. At the time of his arrest, on being asked where he got the spurious money, he said that it was given to him by "his boss," in West-street; but he subsequently asserted that he received it at a liquor-store. When brought before the Commissioner he announced that he drew it as a prize at a target excursion. JAMES HUNG, a witness for the defense, testified that the accused was a member of a target company, and that he attended an excursion which was held a short time ago. The drawing for prizes took place at a liquor-saloon; the numbers being contained in envelopes. One envelope contained an order for a ton of coal, and another for a cord of wood. The one which CARRELL selected, was found to be an order for $20. The inference was that the bill which the prisoner drew was the identical one which he expended for clothing. It did not appear that he had ever been guilty of a similar offence, and he was accordingly discharged with a sharp reprimand.

A Cartman Testifies Against a Bankrupt Merchant.

The examination in the case of AUGUSTUS W. MABEE, a merchant, formerly of the firm of LOCKWOOD & MABEE, hoop-skirt manufacturers, was resumed before Commissioner SHIELDS, yesterday, for the purpose of ascertaining whether there was probable cause to hold him for the Grand Jury on a charge of fraudulent bankruptcy. It was alleged that he had defrauded two of his creditors out of large quantity of merchandise, after he had been adjudged bankrupt. MICHAEL HOGAN, a cartman, of No. 43 Pitt-street, testified that he delivered four loads of covered wire to LOCKWOOD & MABEE, in March, 1869, for the firm of BENJAMIN & DORRANCE. The further hearing in the case was then adjourned.

Desperate Assault on a Prisoner at Jefferson Market Prison.

Early yesterday morning PATRICK FLYNN and JOHN MCKAY, with several others, were committed at the Jefferson Market Police Court yesterday, before Judge SHANDLEY, for disorderly conduct. Shortly afterward an altercation took place between them, when a furious assault was made on FLYNN by all the others, and he was injured severely. In the struggle, MCKAY struck him in the eye with his boot, breaking in the temple. MCKAY was committed on the charge, without bail.

UNITED STATES SUPREME COURT.

The Home Insurance Company vs. Pim, Hartford.—Error to the Circuit Court for the District of Missouri.—This was an action on a policy issued on the dwelling of the defendant in error, situated in Clinton County, Mo. The policy, under date of February, 1865, was in the ordinary form, and contained the following exceptions: "That the Company shall not be liable to make good any loss or damage by fire which may happen or take place by means of any insurrection, riot, or by the enemies, rebels, or any military or usurped power." The house was burned in November of that year, under the following circumstances, as shown by the evidence. In the spring of 1865, a squad of about thirty-five Federal soldiers went to the house which, in the absence of Harrford's family, was in charge of his colored servants. They demanded food for themselves for the night, and were provisioned by the servants. During the night, some few of the soldiers threatened to burn the house, but the lieutenant, in command, assured the servants that no harm should be done. The squad departed in the morning, but soon after they left two soldiers in Federal uniform rode up, and having first the house and left the evidence leaves it unclear whether they belonged to the squad which had been quartered there during the night. Under this state of facts the Company refused to pay, claiming that the fire was in consequence of the insurrection, within the exception in policy. The Court, however, charged the jury that if the house was burned by a few soldiers, not acting as an organized force, but through their own wanton, malicious, or revengeful impulses, and without any orders or authority from any officer in whose command they belonged or if a few soldiers having left their military company or organized force, for the purpose of burning the house through private wantonness, malice or revenge, did so fire the same without any order or authority from any officer in command, then the firing was an act of private incendiarism, and not a military or public act of the enemy. The verdict was for the plaintiff below, and the Company bring the case here claiming error in the charge of the Court, and insisting that their exception in the policy exempts them from payment of the loss, as the fire was caused by soldiers.

The case was argued and submitted on printed briefs.

The United States Supreme Court today gave a decision on the motion for an injunction and appointment of a receiver in the case of the Slaughter-house claimants in the New-Orleans slaughter-house cases. For a number of years it may be remembered that the plaintiffs in error in the several causes undertook to establish, against the grant of a monopoly by the State of Louisiana, a company to and of the Legislature, which gave exclusive privileges to the New-Orleans Live Stock Landing and Slaughter-house Company, and that the Supreme Court of the State gave judgment against them which was taken to the Supreme Court of the United States, and the order continuing it was affirmed by the Supreme Court of the State. The writs of error were then sued out, and the plaintiffs in error being advised that they were thereby set free from the injunction order of the State Court and proceeded in their business in defiance of it, whereupon the Legislature of the State created an additional Court, called the Eighth District Court, giving to it the exclusive jurisdiction over injunction cases, and ordering such cases to be tried by a jury of twelve men. Accordingly, the slaughter-house cases were transferred, and judgment was given against the plaintiffs in error, who did not appeal from it, but filed a bill in Circuit Court to prohibit the Judge of one of the State courts obeying Mr. Justice CLIFFORD delivered the opinion of the Court, holding that, as a writ of error does not lie to the Court the proceedings which are complained of, the petition for writs of error granted. The writ is to be in the Supreme Court of the State, which Court has not abdicated any jurisdiction in violation of it. If it had, the relief asked would be granted. But the proceedings complained of are in the Eighth District Court, which is an inferior Court, and to which the writ does not lie, and the motion, therefore, for the injunction and supersedeas must be denied. Mr. Justice BRADLEY dissented, taking the view that the power conferred in the Judiciary Act to protect the Court from the acts of the inferior Court of the State surrendered an authority necessary to its jurisdiction and the control of causes pending that jurisdiction. The decision leaves the Court without power to protect its jurisdiction in the present, and until after a decision on the merits of the cause.

COURT OF APPEALS.

ALBANY, N.Y., Dec. 2.—The following is the Court of Appeals calendar for Monday, Dec. 5: Nos. 31, 32, 37, 38, 39, 40, 41, 71, 72, 73.

SUPREME COURT.

Before Judge Brady.

Annie M. Shields vs. Thomas H. Shields; judgment of divorce granted.

SUPREME COURT—SPECIAL TERM—FOR DECIDEMENT.

This Court will, on Monday next, the 5th inst., be held by Judge BARNARD, commencing at 10½ o'clock. The following cases are set down for trial at that time: The Erie Railway Company vs. Ramsey et al.; Ramsey vs. The Erie Railway Company, and The Erie Railway Company vs. Vanderbilt. On Tuesday, the 6th inst., Judge BARNARD will commence the regular Term at 11 A. M., and will call all the demurrers on the calendar, from one to twenty-four, inclusive.

COMMON PLEAS—GENERAL TERM—DEC. 2.

Before Chief-Justice Daly, and Judges Robinson and Joseph F. Daly.

INTERESTING QUESTION OF PRACTICE.

Henry Gleb vs. John C. Blanke, et al.—This action was brought to recover damages against defendants for injuries sustained by reason of an attachment granted against the property of plaintiff, consisting of a milk-cart, &c., but subsequently set aside for irregularity and the absence of proper grounds. The action is founded on the bond given on the issuing of the attachment by the defendant and his co-bondsman. A suit had been previously commenced against this defendant, individually, arising out of the same transaction, and charging malicious prosecution. On the trial of this cause counsel for defendant moved that the complaint be dismissed on the ground that a suit was already pending in the Court of Common Pleads for the same cause of action. This motion was denied, and from that judgment this appeal is taken. It appearing upon the record that the suit in the Superior Court was for malicious prosecution, and that it could not be sustained, on the facts when it came to trial, it was held that this action was properly brought.

Judgment affirmed.

David McAdam for appellant, Geo. Carpenter for respondent.

COMMON PLEAS—TRIAL TERM—PART II.—DEC. 2.

Before Judge Loew.

REGULARITY OF DISCHARGE IN BANKRUPTCY.

Mechanics' Banking Association vs. Robert Ulmer.—This is an action in equity to declare a discharge in bankruptcy void for irregularity in the proceedings taken to obtain it. In 1865 the plaintiff obtained judgment against the defendant for the sum of $2,243 50. Subsequent to the entry of the judgment, the defendant obtained his discharge in bankruptcy under the Two-thirds Act, which was set up by way of bar to the enforcement of the judgment against him. Some of the irregularities urged on behalf of plaintiff as invalidating the discharge, was that some of the affidavits used before the Court were taken in other States, and not before officers authorized by the laws of the State to take affidavits. It was contended on behalf of defendant, did not affect the validity of the discharge, and it was further claimed, that even if it did, the discharge could not be attacked in an action of this character, but that it must be done by way of appeal.

Decision reserved.

F. J. Gage for plaintiff, John Graham for defendant.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

THE WAR.

A special telegram to the London Times, dated Tours, Dec. 7, says that the Army of the Loire has effected a junction with Gen. TROCHU's forces from Paris, and that Prince FREDERICK CHARLES' Army is retiring before the united French Army. TROCHU's strength is said to be 150,000 men and 300 cannon. On the other hand dispatches from Prince GEORGE of Saxony, and other German sources, represent that the French sorties were repulsed at all points. The success of the French are believed in Tours, where the people are much excited over them. M. GAMBETTA having made public addresses detailing them, and lauding the gallantry of TROCHU and DUCROT. The excitement has extended to the English cities. GARIBETTA claims the evacuation of Amiens as the result of the assumed success at Paris, but the Germans deny that Amiens has been evacuated. King WILLIAM's telegram to Queen AUGUSTA says the Sixth Corps repulsed the sorties to the south of Paris, Nov. 29, while the sortie on the position of the Wurtemburgers and Saxons to the south and east of Paris, was successful at first, but the positions were retaken by the Germans. At the same time sorties were made to the north and west, which were repulsed. The Tours Moniteur's account says that Gen. DUCROT fought through the day on the 30th, and then crossed the Marne and fought his way to Brie. He then marched back to the Marne, recrossed that river and maintained his position on the bank. As to the movements of the Army of the Loire, the statements are conflicting; one asserting its junction with TROCHU, and another stating that the main portion is massed between Tours and Blois, fifty or sixty miles south of its original position north of the Loire. A German telegram says Gen. VON DER TANN defeated the Army of the Loire on the 1st inst., west of Orleans and Tours.

The Prussians have burned the town of Charleville, because they were fired upon as they approached by Prince TREUIL. A Berlin dispatch says the proposal to consolidate the issues of the new loan has been accepted. Advices from the interior of France represent the priests as inciting the people to resist the Prussians as heretics, and as consequence, it is said, Prussian patrols and dispatch bearers are shot down when none but innocent looking peasants are visible.

THE EASTERN QUESTION.

The reply of Prince GORTSCHAKOFF to Earl GRANVILLE was published on Thursday in St. Petersburg. The Russian Minister declines to discuss the question of propriety involved in his first note. He regrets that Earl GRANVILLE takes exception to his form of communication, and says the abrogation of the entire treaty was not contemplated. The peace of the world required that treaty. Russia, however, is willing to enter into a conference of the Powers. A St. Petersburg dispatch says a public solution can be secured. The Vienna New Free Press says France will participate in a conference to be held at London. A dispatch from Tours, however, says that that branch of the Government has referred the subject to their colleagues in Paris, according to the Vienna journal above named, the protest may Germanic will involve other questions than those connected with the treaty of 1856. A Berlin telegram says a new treaty will be proposed, omitting the question of the Black Sea neutrality.

GENERAL EUROPEAN NEWS.

The municipal elections in Ireland, on Monday, were attended with scenes of disorder which, in Limerick, became serious. A meeting in Dublin to express sympathy with the Fenians on Thursday, was prohibited by several members of Parliament and other influential persons. The prisoners, Deasy and part of the escape of the escaping Czars have been served. The Oxford "eight" have challenged the Cambridge Club for the annual boat race. The North German Federal Council has ratified the treaty with Bavaria. The Baron Jules Rothschild has ceased to act on the bench. Baron Kolbe von Kornnerwill, the Austrian Minister of War, has resigned. Marshal Bazaine's sentence has been commuted to one year's imprisonment. The Vienna Ins. disappointed from Wednesday. Advices and Remittances, in Spain.

CHINA.

On the 9th of November an insurrection had broken out in Mongolia, and 40,000 Tartars were threatening Cowan, the capital of the province. A Chinese force, armed with Russian rifles, has been sent to oppose the movement.

GENERAL.

The Rolling Commissioner of Internal Revenue has decreed that the income from the Mormon church property, held by BRIGHAM YOUNG as trustee, is taxable; the points raised by Mr. YOUNG, that it consisted of voluntary contributions, and that it was held as common property by more than five persons, and therefore exempt, being overruled. The penalties of excommunication and other punishments for non-payment of tithes were held to destroy their character as voluntary contributions. The Collector of Internal Revenue in Utah has been directed to collect the tax as case, without the penalty which was added for non-payment.

English Public Opinion on the Russian Difficulty.

The tone of the most powerful of English journals serves to indicate the general drift of public opinion in Great Britain. The people are apparently deeply perplexed between two sentiments—the one that it would be very foolish to fight for the Turk any more, the other that it is time something should be done to maintain the "prestige" of England. They seem to have a deep conviction that England is somehow sinking very rapidly in the esteem of other nations, and that she cannot very well afford to put up with any further insults. The "stand-and-deliver" tone of GORTSCHAKOFF's first dispatch was something more than they felt they ought to submit to with patience, and if they tamely yielded to that there was no telling how soon they might be called upon to bear a greater humiliation. The thing asked by Russia was not so impalatable as the way in which it was asked. Hence the people very soon made up their minds that it would be better to go to war at once than be "bullied" by Russia.

But this virtually meant going to war for Turkey, for as we have endeavored to make clear, England herself has no interest which is actually threatened by Russia. Now there are probably not a thousand men in all England who would vote for a fresh war in defense of what Mr. CARLYLE very justly calls the "torpid nuisance" of Europe. When it could once be made clear that Russia was not acting in concert with Prussia for the degradation of England, the feeling in favor of war would be sure to pass away. We know now that GORTSCHAKOFF's subsequent dispatches must have sufficed to settle this point; but when the last mail left England the subject was still in great doubt. Yet even then some eminent Englishmen were trying to calm the popular excitement. Mr. J. S. MILL wrote a letter in which he said: "The honor of England is not concerned either in the protection of Turkey, or in the humiliation of Russia. Treaties are not made to be eternal"—and so forth. Mr. FROUDE warned his country men against the "frightful consequences" of a war with Russia. He pointed out that privateers would soon be equipped in American ports in revenge for the Alabama wrong, and "war with America would be the immediate consequence." By this time the people of England must thoroughly appreciate the significance of the "Alabama claims."

There are circumstances, however, under which no nation can refuse to go to war, no matter how grave may be the risk incurred—and if the Russian demand had been pressed in its original form, the advice of Mr. MILL and the remonstrances of Mr. FROUDE would have been alike ineffectual. But Russia is not willing to go to war until it is proved that she cannot gain her object without it, and the proposed conference is not unlikely to convince her that an appeal to the sword will be superfluous. England is not called upon to fight single-handed for the maintenance of a treaty to which she was only one party. Moreover, the treaty itself is admitted to be harsh, and as GORTSCHAKOFF points out in his latest dispatch, the state of Europe is so different now from what it was in 1856, that a revision of the obnoxious document may be demanded with perfect propriety. In what way the dispute will be settled remains to be seen, but that the final result will be the establishment of a Russian Protectorate in Turkey, with most of the other concessions which she asks, there can be very little doubt. By asking a little more at first than she was ready to take, Russia is likely to get the substance of what she wanted, and England will be glad to have escaped the necessity of fighting once more for the Ottoman Empire.

The Sortie From Paris and the Movements on the Loire.

In collating the somewhat contradictory array of war telegrams which we publish this morning, the fact must be steadily borne in mind that both sides keep silent about everything save their successes. In the present case, we may therefore give almost complete credence to the accounts furnished both from French and Prussian sources, and remembering simply the priority in point of time or most of the former, may find the combined narrative tolerably consistent after all. We have details, more or less complete, of two sorties by the garrison of Paris. The first, which was merely intended to divert the attention of the enemy from the more important attack that was to follow it, occurred on Tuesday, and was under the command of Gen. VINOY. The points threatened by this movement were the Prussian lines on the south of Paris immediately in front of Forts Bicetre and Ivry, and somewhat in advance of the hamlets of L'Hay and Chevilly. This was repulsed by the Sixth Prussian Corps under Gen. VON TUMPLING, evidently without much difficulty. Meanwhile, however, Gens. TROCHU and DUCROT were directing the advance of about 120,000 regular troops, who, under the fire of the south-eastern forts, were advancing upon the German positions on the south-east of Paris. To understand the details given of this movement, it is necessary to bear in mind the peculiar configuration of the River Marne at the point selected for attack, as well as the distribution of the Prussian positions in the same quarter. Starting, then, from the German position at Brie, a point about five miles beyond Castle Vincennes on the east of Paris, the Marne, before joining the Seine at Charenton, describes a curve in the form of a large S. While Brie representing the upper extremity of the letter, and Boinceuil representing the lower, are within safe distance of the fire of the outer forts, there are obviously points on the inner surface of the upper curve which are commanded by Vincennes and Charenton. On one side, then, we have a semicircle of forts, on the other a corresponding semicircle of intrenched positions, beginning with Mount Mesly, and including Chennevieres, Champigny, Villiers and Brie. Between these the Marne describes its large S, measuring along the line of the curve about ten miles, and when bisected by a straight line from Brie to Mount Mesly, giving a distance of between five and six miles.

On Tuesday evening the troops led by Gen. DUCROT crossed the Marne, where the lower curve of the S slopes upward to join the Seine. The attention of the German troops having been occupied with the sortie under Gen. VINOY, five miles further west, Mount Mesly appears to have been taken without serious resistance. Early on Wednesday morning, however, the Sixth Prussian Corps threatened this position, and the French General, wheeling round to the north-east, directed the whole weight of his attack upon the Wurtemberger and Saxon corps occupying the positions extending over the six miles that separate Bonneuil from Brie. The Germans intrenched in this quarter appear to have suffered severely, but succeeded in making a stand till the arrival of reinforcements prevented the enemy effecting a permanent breach in the German line. The French being still on the left or east bank of the Marne, and now immediately in front of the S curve, made one more effort on Wednesday afternoon to effect the purpose aimed at by the sortie. Toward nightfall the Germans appear to have received further reinforcements, and the French made good their retreat to the right or west bank of the Marne, protected once more by the guns of Vincennes and Charenton.

That this movement justifies the amount of exultation it has excited at Tours can hardly be admitted. That it shows a greatly-improved morale, and a much more soldierly handling than heretofore of the French troops, there can be no question. The sorties before Paris were evidently made in concert with the reported movements of the Army of the Loire. In the absence of anything like coherent details about the latter, we can only observe that, beginning on Wednesday, there seems to have been three days of somewhat desultory fighting between the German corps—occupying a line of upward of thirty miles in length, running nearly parallel with the course of the Loire about ten miles to the north of that river at Orleans—and sections of the Army of the Loire. There is no evidence that the main body of Gen. DE PALLADINES' command was at any time engaged in these operations. Neither is there any evidence, save that of an unsupported statement from Tours, entirely at variance with the tenor of all previous dispatches, that any junction has been effected between Gens. TROCHU and DUCROT and the Army of the Loire. The chief portion of that army evidently awaits the attack of the enemy between Blois and Tours, a position a good deal further to the south and west than the last reported Prussian one. The conclusion we draw from the late sorties at Paris, and the partially concentrical movements on the Loire, is, that although they show very unmistakably that the French capacity for resistance is on the increase, they only demonstrate still more clearly that the chances of the troops inside of Paris breaking through the German environment, and of the Army of the Loire forming a junction with any part of the garrison, are equally dubious.

Mr. Carlyle on the War.

Most of the political wisdom now extant is to be found in the writings of Thomas CARLYLE, and therefore any opinion which he expressed on the events of the hour would naturally be received with reverence. We know that in some of his opinions in past times he has been wrong—wrong to an extent which must have brought conviction to his own mind that his judgment had deceived him. But much may be forgiven to a man who has placed the whole world under enduring obligations to him, and whose writings have done more to create a sound and healthy public sentiment than those of any other man, alive or dead. His present letter on the war between France and Germany will be a severe test to the patience of many of his disciples, but no intelligent being walking on two legs can afford to leave it unread. It will be found, unabridged, in another part of this paper.

Mr. CARLYLE's argument is that Germany does right to pursue France to the "bitter end," because France has in former times inflicted great wrongs upon Germany. If France is now compelled to make restitution, it only serves her right. "That noble, patient, deep, pious, and solid Germany should be at length welded into a nation, and become Queen of the Continent, instead of vaporing, vain-glorious, gesticulating, quarrelsome, restless, and over-sensitive France, seems to me the hopefulest public fact that has occurred in my time." These are the words of the great writer—and for France they are very bitter words. Mark, too, the pitiless and accurate manner in which he describes the present position of France: "A France scattered into anarchic ruin, without recognizable head; head, or chief, indistinguishable from foot, or rabble; Ministers flying up in balloons, ballasted with nothing but outrageous public lies, proclamations of victories that were creatures of the fancy; a Government subsisting altogether on mendacity, willing that horrid bloodshed should continue and increase rather than that they, beautiful Republican creatures, should cease to have the guidance of it. I know not when or where there was seen a nation so covering itself with dishonor." RHADAMANTHUS could administer justice in no sterner spirit.

Whether Mr. CARLYLE happens to have read Lord MACAULAY or not is more than we can say—though we should judge not, since there were too many fireworks about MACAULAY to suit the taste of the "sage of Chelsea." But there is a passage in MACAULAY's Essay on FREDERICK the Great which seems to us to dispose of the greater part of CARLYLE's argument, and it is that in which he condemns the pretext used by FREDERICK for the seizure of Silesia—the pretext, namely, that it originally belonged to Prussia. We are not aware that Lord MACAULAY's argument on this point has ever been quoted, and as it is very pertinent to more than one "European crisis" at this moment, our readers may find it convenient if we give it here:

"Is it not perfectly clear that, if antiquated claims are to be set up against recent treaties and long possession, the world can never wisely establish a time of limitation, after which titles, however illegitimate in their origin, cannot be questioned? It is felt by everybody, that to eject a person from his estate on the ground of some injustice committed in the time of the TUDORS would produce all the evils which result from arbitrary confiscation, and would make all property insecure. It concerns the commonwealth—so runs the legal maxim—that there be an end of litigation. And surely this maxim is at least equally applicable to the great commonwealth of States; for, in the Commonwealth, litigation means the devastation of provinces, the suspension of trade and industry, sieges like those of Badajos and St. Sebastian, pitched fields like those of Eylau and Borodino. We hold that the transfer of Norway and Denmark to Sweden was an unjustifiable proceeding; but would the King of Denmark be therefore justified in landing, without any new provocation, in Norway, and commencing military operations there? The King of Holland thinks, no doubt, that he was unjustly deprived of the Belgian provinces. Grant that it were so. Would he, therefore, be justified in marching with an army on Brussels?"

The long and short of it all is, that if treaties and definite settlements are not to last longer than suits the convenience of the parties chiefly concerned, the sword is not likely to answer the purpose of a plowshare, nor the spear to be beaten into a pruning-hook, while the present dispensation endures.

We have quoted MACAULAY against CARLYLE, because he supplies a really forcible answer; but, at the same time, no one will deny the truth of much that CARLYLE says. We are afraid, however, that he is a little in advance of mankind generally in his estimate of BISMARCK's character. We only hope that it may turn out that CARLYLE is right and mankind, minus CARLYLE, wrong.

Our Postal System.

The report of the Postmaster-General may not awaken the lively interest which attaches to some official documents, but it touches more directly than most the social as well as the business concerns of the people. With all its imperfections, the postal system of this country is one of the best illustrations of the care and efficiency with which urgent wants of the remotest communities are provided for, and the relations of widely separated sections are maintained. What the Department costs is in the popular mind a matter of less moment than the thoroughness of the service which it performs. The stoppage of that would be practical disunion, and any saving of expenditure consequent upon its imperfections would be scouted as a false and disastrous economy. It does not follow, however, that the question of expense is of no moment. A system that gave us the fullest possible postal facilities, regardless of profit or loss, would be hailed as a boon, in comparison with a slow, unsafe, and expensive service. This Nation still is one that combines tolerable efficiency with a near approach to a balance of income and outlay. The Department seems to be gradually approaching this standard. It is yet susceptible of improvement, but the Postmaster-General shows that he is not blind to its imperfections, nor unobservant of the lessons suggested by other countries. And with all this, the Department promises soon to be self-sustaining. The difference between income and outgo decreases steadily. In the last fiscal year it was less than three millions.

The abolition of the franking privilege would, in the opinion of the Postmaster-General, equalize the accounts. "I am thoroughly satisfied," he tells us, "that if the franking privilege were repealed, and all matter passing through the mails charged with its fair share of postage, the Department would in a short time become self-sustaining." If the exercise of the privilege were fraught with substantial advantage to the people, it might be submitted to, costly as it is. But it has not this recommendation. The benefits are infinitesimal—the abuses flagrant and incurable. It is a perquisite to Senators and Representatives,—not a gain to the people; and a perquisite, too, which in the majority of cases is applied to the most paltry uses. If the pay of our legislators is insufficient, let it be increased; but at all events let us not be required to contribute to their election expenses, or to put money into the pockets of schemers, by keeping up the franking privilege. The country regards it as a scandal and a wrong, and Mr. CRESWELL deserves thanks for the courageous pertinacity with which he presses a great reform upon an unwilling Congress.

Another branch of the subject, which does not admit of delay, is that relating to railroad routes and the necessity for readjusting the pay allowed to companies for service performed. Official correspondence recently published showed that on many routes the companies make the conveyance of mails a matter of convenience, that they adapt the route to their own plans, and that they do so because of the inadequacy of the remuneration fixed by law. Inefficient service, where it does occur, is mainly traceable to these circumstances. The present rates are regulated by the act of March, 1845, and the Postmaster-General so far sympathizes with the complaint of the companies as to recommend a revision of the law and an increase of the compensation—taking care, however, to make the allowance of the latter contingent upon amended service.

Notable among the recommendations of the report is one referring to the introduction of "correspondence," or "post-cards," now in use in Great Britain and North Germany. These cards are convenient, because requiring no folding or envelope, and their special adaptation is to brief business or social communications. They may be called, in fact, postal messages, and if carried, as Mr. CRESWELL proposes, at the rate of one cent each, they will really reduce the city postage one-half. Their introduction will tend to bring into general use the brevity and point of the telegraphic dispatch, and will thus deliver us from much of the bondage of the old epistolary form.

Lady Physicians.

Edinburgh has not generally been reckoned the most "progressive" place in the world, unless, perhaps, in metaphysics and moral philosophy. Nevertheless, there are seven young ladies regularly enrolled at the medical school there, who have had granted to them the privileges of study, and of matriculation, in due course, as alumnæ of the University. "Mrs. Dr." will consequently become as common a title in North Britain, at no distant day, as it is fast getting to be in the United States. In spite of this surprising concession, however, the conservative spirit of a Scotch faculty has displayed itself in the exclusion of the seven ladies from the wards of the Infirmary. The inconvenience to the clinical lecturers of treating certain subjects before a mixed assembly of both sexes is the reason assigned for shutting the hospital doors against the female students; and five hundred of their male associates, in the most ungallant manner, have petitioned the authorities to persist in enforcing their rule of exclusion. The petitioners assert that had they foreseen being called upon to walk the wards in company with young ladies they would have sought another school. The ladies say that the medical school has no right, having taken their fees and accepted them as students, to refuse them any of the ordinary rights or privileges of students. Represented as they are by one of the ablest of living women, Miss SOPHIA JEX BLAKE, and having an argument in itself by no means easy to answer, the ladies certainly occupy a strong position, and one which it will be very hard to turn.

The difficulty must sooner or later have been fairly met and disposed of, and it is well that a test case has thus arisen wherein all that can be said on both sides of the controversy is pretty sure to be logically and eloquently set forth. Most reasonable and delicate-minded persons will admit on first thoughts the force of the adverse argument of the managers of the Infirmary and the petitioning students. It would seem, in truth, that only differently constituted people would wish to override so rational an objection. Yet, as commonly occurs, the argument of one side looks conclusive only until the other is heard. Miss JEX BLAKE urges that "A large proportion of the patients in the Infirmary being women, and women being present in all the wards as nurses, there can be nothing exceptional in our presence there as students. In our opinion, no objection can be raised to our attending clinical teaching, even in the male wards, which does not apply with at least equal force to the present instruction of male students in the female wards."

She further points out that among the subscribers and donors to the Infirmary there are as many women as men; that the wishes of a majority of the whole are in favor of the unrestricted admission of both sexes upon a common platform, and that three of the chief clinical lecturers, Drs. BALFOUR, WATSON and BENNETT, are willing to admit the ladies, with male students, to all their classes. These considerations are plainly entitled to be carefully weighed, and the result bids fair to be satisfactory to Miss BLAKE and her enterprising companions.

It is clear that, if women are to be allowed by law and public opinion to practice medicine at all, it is highly irrational to exclude them from any means open to the other sex for obtaining professional knowledge. The reasoning of those who maintain the incapacity of women to become good doctors, may or may not be sound; but its practical force must obviously be increased by the exclusion of female students from any privileges enjoyed by the males. The less the ability, the greater the need of culture, and the greater the relative value of experience. From the general drift and conduct of the Edinburgh discussion, it seems probable that the nice question touching the "delicacy" of women going through the usual clinical course, will be left are long to the taste and discretion of the candidates themselves. Women who feel strongly drawn to the medical profession, are not likely to be squeamish, and the most simple and convenient method of settling this controversy will be apt in the sequel to prove the one adopted.

MINOR TOPICS.

The Economist publishes a very severe article on the government of New-York City, and on the chief persons connected with that government. There is no denying the fact that the Economist is an English newspaper, and the friends of TWEED, SWEENY, and FISK will doubtless make as much as they can out of that circumstance. But they will perhaps remember that the statements of the Economist are fully borne out by the articles which appeared in the New-York World last spring, so that we suppose there must be some truth in them. It is not conceivable that the World would deceive its readers on such a subject. The article in the Economist contains nothing that will be new to our readers, but, if not new, it is all true, and, therefore, will bear reading.

The dispute between the Erie Company and the Delaware, Lackawanna, and Western Company, with reference to the Bergen Tunnel, is very disgraceful. It reappears at short intervals, and always in a shape which under good management would be impossible. The most careful arrangements are needed at any time to secure to passengers through the tunnel the proper degree of safety; but safety is unattainable so long as the officers or workmen of either Company are at liberty to obstruct the passage of the other's trains. At one time an Erie switchman, or conductor, or superintendent, virtually closes the tunnel; at another, agents of the Delaware and Lackawanna are at fault; the result in each case being a provoking hindrance of travel, and a more or less serious disturbance of the peace. The cause of the trouble yesterday was so insignificant, that a few minutes' conference should have sufficed for its removal. Yet it remained in operation the greater part of the day; as many as seventy trains were stopped at the western end of the tunnel; some thousands of passengers were grievously inconvenienced; and a serious riot was all the time imminent. For this state of things there is no excuse. The Erie chiefs are, of course, too much occupied with other matters to attend to legitimate business, and therefore the public need not expect much consideration from them.

Not to be behind the Europeans, China has got a war upon her hands. The irrepressible Tartar population, who keep up the process relatively to the Celestial Empire which the Northern barbarians did, for some centuries, in regard to the Romans, have made another of their chronic insurrections. Between the Western traders who are creeping up her rivers from the eastern sea-board, and the nomadic races that keep up the infiltration of barbaric ideas of freedom from the west, the venerable and stationary civilization of the "Flowery Land" has some rude shocks before it in the immediate future.

The communication of Mr. F. W. J. HUNZE, of the National Steam Shipping Company, read at the meeting of the Department of Docks, brings out very clearly the utterly inadequate nature of the accommodation provided for European steamers at this port. Mr. HUNZE's forcible statement of practical details will be fully appreciated by any one who takes the trouble to inspect the condition of the North River piers devoted to European traffic. The enormous waste of time and money that must be entailed by the ridiculously circumscribed limits in which an enormous trade has to be disposed of, will become apparent to the most unprofessional observer, and the crying necessity for some immediate action being taken to retain so important a branch of the commerce of the port as the European traffic not yet migrated to Jersey, will be at once recognized.

North Carolina's languishing credit will not be improved by Gov. HOLDEN's exposition of the condition and purposes of the people. To pay the interest on the present debt, and to carry on the Government, taxation amounting to $3,500,000 is required. The Governor is candid enough to say that the people of the State will not pay this amount. Impoverished by the war, they are in no condition to endure heavy taxation, and, besides, they refuse to consider themselves liable for more than a part of the old debt, or for more than the amounts which the new or special bonds "commanded from first hands." If this is not partial repudiation, what would be? A recasting or consolidation and "scaling" of the debt is what this view must lead to, and though Gov. HOLDEN pretences to deprecate it, he sees no method of averting it. He cites the will of the people as the supreme law, and the State creditors must submit with as much grace as they can muster.

Virginia seems likely to lose some of the recent additions to its adult population. We showed the other day, on the authority of the Richmond Whig, that Northern farmers are disappointed in regard to the productiveness of the soil. Now we learn from the Petersburg Index that political and social reasons have induced others to sell out and return to the North. "Others would do the same," the Index adds, "if they could find purchasers." Why are they dissatisfied? "The reason assigned is that they cannot express their political opinions and vote with the same freedom as they did at their former homes, without incurring the penalty of social ostracism by their neighbors of the Conservative Party." If just, the reason is quite sufficient. And we infer from the comments of the Index that there is some foundation for the allegation. The editor protests, indeed, that he and his friends have maintained pleasant relations with new-comers, but there is significance in the injunction that "a stranger can only advance his interests" "by deporting himself with modesty and propriety until such time as his standing becomes fixed." Perhaps the Virginia "Conservative" thinks that a stranger who votes the Radical ticket violates "modesty and propriety."

WASHINGTON.

Hints Regarding Tone and Matter of the President's Message—The New Revenue Reform Party—Brooklyn Postal Facilities—The Northern Indian Council—Swindling Patent Lawyers.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 8.—From the little that can be learned regarding the tone and matter of the President's forthcoming Message, the public may expect a document full of bold and positive expressions. It will be somewhat longer than that of last year, and will discuss all the matters that have engaged the attention of the Administration for the past year. There will be a recommendation of action on the fisheries question, and a review of what has been done in the Indian service, with a pretty broad intimation that the civil service reform, which the people most need, is still being actively prosecuted. The President will adhere, with characteristic firmness, to his position on the acquisition of a foothold in the West Indies; and on the question of reviving our commerce he will reassert the views expressed last Summer. The President has given considerable thought lately to the great evils arising from the growing power of great corporations, and the concentration of vast material interests in the hands of the few. His may, however, prefer to present this matter to Congress at a later period, when his views as to the remedy are more thoroughly defined. Altogether, the Message is said to be decidedly affirmative in tone, and it is confidently expected that it will strike the public mind even more favorably than did that of last year.

THE NEW REVENUE REFORM PARTY.

It is a noticeable fact that the efforts made here thus far to determine who are going into the new revenue reform party coalition, for the purpose of organizing the next House, have all resulted in complete failure to find a single Republican, as yet, who is willing to be considered as ready for this job. Senators TRUMBULL, SCHURZ and CARPENTER have repudiated all tendency that way, while ALLISON, ORTH and SARGENT, though not members of the next House, disavow any sympathy with such a purpose, and LOGAN sends word here from Illinois that he is no party to any movement for the organization of the next House that is not regular Republican. So far there is yet neither form nor substance to the proposed movement.

THE COLORED MEMBER OF THE HOUSE.

Among the members who have arrived, "the colored man and brother" will present himself to the House on Monday next in the person of J. H. RAINEY, of South Carolina, elected to fill the vacancy caused by the enforced resignation of Mr. WHITTEMORE, who now graces the South Carolina State Senate. So there will be in the House a colored contemporary of Hon. Mr. REVELS in the Senate, and the equality of races in the two Houses will be satisfactorily maintained.

BROOKLYN POSTAL FACILITIES.

C. C. TALBOT, Esq., was today appointed Postmaster at Williamsburg, N. Y., vice SIEMLER, suspended. This change was recommended by nearly all the prominent Republicans of Brooklyn, including the United States officers, and the leaders of the different factions, so far as they exist in that city now. It will not interfere with the proposed consolidation of the three Brooklyn offices, which the Postmaster-General will carry into effect as soon as the necessary legislation for the same can be secured. A bill is now before the Senate for that purpose.

CONTESTED ELECTIONS.

As far as known here there will be very few cases of contested elections brought before the House in the next Congress. No more than ten districts have been heard from where contests have been spoken of as possible, while the number, at present appearances, likely to arise will be only four or five. In the present term more than thirty seats have had rival claimants, which, besides furnishing an enormous amount of labor to the Committee on Elections and consuming, all told, more than a month's time of the House, cost the Treasury directly more than $100,000. The marked reduction of cases of the kind is noteworthy as an indication of the decline of political bitterness, and a spirit of determination to aid the will of the people, unless there is the plainest evidence that it has not found perfect expression.

THE COMING INDIAN COUNCIL.

Commissioner PARKER, of the Indian Office, leaves this city to-morrow for New-York, whence he will proceed, after a brief delay, to the West, to attend the grand Indian Council. The Council meets at Ocmulgee, in the Creek Nation. It is provided for by the treaty with the Creeks, ratified June, 1866, and is composed of delegates from the tribes resident in the Indian Territory, and the Councils presided over by the Superintendent of Indian Affairs. The Grand Council met first in September last, but as only a few delegates were present, it was adjourned till Monday next. It receives the encouragement of the Government in the hope that it may have a civilizing tendency on the tribes.

SWINDLING PATENT LAWYERS.

The revised Patent laws which went into effect July 8, contain a provision under which the Patent Office is able to rid itself and inventors of swindling attorneys, who have caused much annoyance, and in some cases serious injury, both to the office and its patrons. The third case under the law was recently finished. OTTO SEIBERING, of this city, was charged with gross misconduct: first, of repeatedly receiving from inventors moneys to be paid into the Patent Office as final Government fees upon allowed applications, and retaining the same, although payment was several times demanded by the Commissioner. Twelve cases were cited. The second charge was that he had represented that he had formerly been a full examiner in the office, when in fact he had never been more than a clerk. SEIBERING was given full opportunity to answer, and was treated with as much leniency as justice. He was, however, adjudged guilty, and debarred from practicing before the office in any case. The order of the Commissioner was approved by Secretary DELANO. Other similar cases are under consideration by Gen. DUNCAN, the Acting Commissioner.

CLEARING-HOUSE CERTIFICATES.

As some of the three per cent. certificates called in under the late order of the Secretary of the Treasury may include some which have been stamped for Clearing-house purposes, the Secretary of the Treasury has directed the Assistant Treasurer at New-York to stamp other certificates of equal amount in place of such as may be included in his call, in order that the aggregate amount of Clearing-house certificates may not be reduced.

HEALTH OF SENATOR MORRILL.

A letter has been received from Senator MORRILL, of Maine, in which he says that his health is surely improving, but that he will probably not visit Washington before the holidays. There will be no business of moment before his Committee (Appropriations) prior to that time, as it must await the preparation of those measures in the House.

Lefrancq, Gausins, Prefigam, Brunel, Juignet, Edgard, Rousseau and Gastigny, will occur.

The Aldine Press for December is a superb number—far superior to even the brilliant productions which have already proceeded from the same press. Several of the illustrations are tinted—the first subject being a head of our Savior; the design is a noble one, and the execution of it quite faultless. We cannot praise too highly the pictures of the dogs, of the "Cossack Horses in Winter," or of the old Hall hit up for Christmas festivities, while the "outsiders" pass eagerly through the gateway. There is an etching of the "Infant St. John," which no admirer of such works can do without. This publication is altogether almost unexampled—it opens up a new era in American art, and will be preserved by collectors among their choicest treasures.

CURRENT NOTES.

SIR JOHN MCDONALD, of Canada, is to have a testimonial from a grateful public.

A recent attempt to establish a private post-office at Chicago on the New-York principle, proved a failure.

A Canadian exchange casually remarks that the municipal debt of this City is as great as the whole debt of the Dominion.

The total loss by fires at New-Haven, Conn., since the year 1860, amounts to $2,184,725, of which amount the insurance companies paid $1,170,315.

After an absence of one day, three rascals recently returned to Portsmouth, N. H., with 2,000 pounds of fish.

An excited merchant, at Detroit, Mich., who shot a burglar the other night, has been arrested.

The Post claims that the facilities at Boston for receiving large bodies of immigrants and sending them direct to the West, are not inferior to those of any other city on the sea-board.

Several leading public men of Philadelphia have resolved that the "Horse-Shoe Shoals," opposite the lower part of that city, ought to be removed.

A number of Celestials at the house of the celebrated Chinese physician, at San Francisco, were injured seriously, if not fatally, on the 23d inst., by a gas explosion.

At a meeting of the Missouri Woman's Suffrage Association, recently held, Miss PHEBE COUSINS paid a very handsome tribute to the memory of the late Mrs. BASKALOW, the first female lawyer in that State.

A genuine love affair between a Russian gentleman and Miss JULIA MERROS, formerly of Elbridge, Onondaga County, recently culminated in marriage. The ceremony took place in Switzerland.

The Wayne County Citizen tells the story of a woman named VIOLET JUSTICE, a resident of Buckingham, in this State, who was arrested a few days since on a charge of having assisted a female friend to destroy her life.

A controversy in regard to the disposition of the Kingsbury estate, at Chicago, in which Gen. BURNSIDE and others are defendants, is at present under investigation in one of the Courts of that city.

Four boys, who lately started from Philadelphia with revolvers and a capital of $100, for the purpose of becoming bandits on the Plains, were arrested at Pittsburg and sent home to their mothers on Wednesday.

Ten immense buildings of Joliet stone are at present in course of construction on Rock Island, Ill., for a Government arsenal, which is probably destined to supersede those of St. Louis and Springfield, Mass.

Cleveland, Ohio, seems determined to have nine professional base-ball players to contest for the championship with the Mutuals and White Stockings the coming season. With this view, the Forest City Club has been chartered, and half the capital stock already subscribed.

The daily catch of white-fish in Lake Ontario during the past fortnight as reported to have been from two to three tons. Some time since a paragraph went the rounds, which stated that the scarcity of white and other fish in the lake was so great that the supply would fail at no distant period. There is evidently a mistake somewhere.

Another verdict has been rendered against MARTIN, the defaulting cashier of the National Hide and Leather Bank of Boston. The jury in the case of AMOS P. TAPLEY against MARTIN, found for the plaintiff $5,714, the amount claimed, and found specially that Mr. TAPLEY had paid the amount of the bond in good faith, and with the assent of MARTIN.

A movement is now on foot to raise $100,000 for the purpose of making the Buffalo General Hospital permanently independent. Less than $15,000 will not be taken from a single subscriber. Mr. S. G. AUSTIN heads the list with $10,000. This gentleman has also given $5,000 to the Buffalo Orphan Asylum, on condition that $50,000 shall be raised.

Although WESTON is a native of Providence, R. I., the newspapers of that city seem to have lost faith in him. The Journal suggests that a variation be made in the accustomed exercise at the next trial, so that he may "jump, amble, dance, or use his light fantastic toes on anything except a walk." He is no pedestrian, and he will never make a decent walker, whatever else he may be.

The traveler of a Cincinnati wholesale house, named C. D. JOHNSON & Co., of Fulton Landing, N. Y., He caused a good sized poster, bearing the name of their firm, to be placed upon the walls of the town, offering to purchase house cats at prices ranging from $12 to $18 per dozen. The result was that during several days, hundreds of these animals, in barrels and crates, were brought to the store of the Messrs. JOHNSON. Among other dupes there was a young farmer, who thought he saw in the notice a good chance to turn an honest penny, and went about the country purchasing cats until he succeeded in collecting 500. He now declares that he will compel the traveler to keep his word, even though he should be obliged to take the animals with him to Cincinnati, and commence a suit in the Courts of that city.

A simple-minded German, who had some difficulty with an insurance agent at Pittsburg, Penn., the other day, ceased to make payments upon a policy of insurance on his wife, in consequence of the agent having broken faith with him in another transaction. It seems the German had insured his stable for $800, at the same time that he took out a policy on his wife. In the ordinary course of events the stable took fire, and was entirely consumed. The agent discovered that the building had not at any time been worth $600, and erected a new brick one for $[illegible], thus saving $150 to the Company. The German declared that he wanted the money more than the stable, and being fearful, in the event of his wife's death, that the Company might endeavor to replace her also, instead of paying the amount of insurance, he forfeited the premium already paid, and gave up the business in disgust.

A California Romance—The Fortune of a Scottish Sailor Lad.

[Sacramento Correspondence of Chicago Tribune.]

SACRAMENTO, Nov. 15.

About the year 1800 a Scotch sailor named James Beaver, deserted from a whaler lying in San Francisco Bay, and, after divers adventures, settled down at the Mission of Rafael, about twelve miles above the metropolis. He learned the Spanish language, and eventually married into the Spanish family of SERVILVEDA. He received an immense grant of land from the Mexican Government, covered it with a few acres beside with his cattle, and generally enlarged himself into the form and stature of an old-time California grandee. In the course of time he had a daughter born unto him, heir and vast estates—his only child, I believe. Then came the amazing rush and thronging hither of thousands, and again thousands of hungry miners, and this whilom, ragged Scottish lad, who had once skulked like a malefactor in these parts, found himself suddenly in possession of a "wee bit siller." Some are born great, some achieve greatness, and some have greatness thrust upon them. He was evidently of this latter sort, like many other early Californians, for he appears to have been of a rather feeble order of mathematics. He decided one of his valuable ranches to his daughter, and, in 1864, she married a dentist, in San Francisco, named BURDELL, a nephew of Dr. BURDELL, murdered in New-York, to which marriage her father was opposed.

About a year afterward Mrs. BLACK went down to San Francisco, to have a dental operation performed by her son-in-law, and she died under the influence of his chloroform. This done her husband almost distracted; he became disengaged and benetted, fell into the toils of a marauding Mexican widow named ALMEDO, who scared him by a falsehood in regard to her condition into a hasty marriage. She poisoned his imbecile mind against his daughter, and caused him to believe that she had mortgaged the ranch he decided to her. He became blighty, made a new will every week and tore it up, maltreated every one alike to cut off his daughter portionless, except for the ranch already her own. Finally he fell off his horse on a bilkside while riding after cattle, struck his head with violence on a rock, and, after lingering awhile, died, though he made no new will after his head was injured. After his death the parties assembled in the family parlor to listen to the reading of the will, and the daughter then learned beyond peradventure that she was cut off without a dime, except for the ranch. She rose quietly and calmly, and asked to see the will. It was handed to her, and, as the twinkling of an eye she tore [illegible]

ARCHITECTURAL IMPROVEMENTS.

[illegible] Stadium to be Erected—A Jewish Temple—The Proposed Handsome Building of the Germania Savings Bank—A Central Park Apartment House—Improvements in the Fifth-avenue Church.

Plans for a number of new and expensive buildings have recently been submitted at the Department of Buildings in this City, JAMES M. MAGENNISS, Superintendent, of which the following are the most important:

[illegible] JEWISH TEMPLE.

The lot of ground situated on the south-west corner of Lexington-avenue and Fifty-fifth-street, with a frontage on the avenue of 100 feet 8 inches and a depth of 180 feet, has been lately purchased by the Jewish congregation of "Ahawath Chesed." Upon this lot the direction of a new edifice will be immediately commenced, which, when finished, will be an ornament to this section of the City. The new church will resemble in form the Fifth-avenue Synagogue, having square towers on the two front corners, in which the stairways giving entrance to the galleries will be located. The main entrance to the edifice will be through the large doors in the centre. The size of the proposed new building is 92 feet front, 60 feet rear, 145 feet in depth, and in height from the sidewalk to the top of the roof. The interior will comprise a cellar basement and the auditorium, the latter being about 60 by 120 feet in the clear, and 45 feet in height. Two spacious galleries will furnish additional accommodations. The material to be used in the construction will be Croton water-lime and brownstone, with Ohio stone for the cornices of galvanized iron. The walls will be coped with cut stone. The foundation is laid on the solid rock, with a foundation in depth of from ten to fifteen feet; the upper walls are three feet thick and the entire work is to be executed in a perfect and substantial manner. The estimate cost of the new temple is $105,000, exclusive of the value of the ground. The architect is Mr. HENRY FERNBACH, No. 21 Nassau-street, and the builder engaged Mr. SAMUEL COCHRAN.

THE NEW GERMAN SAVINGS BANK.

The new German Savings Bank, preparations for the erection of which have been in progress during the entire Summer and Autumn, as the plans for the building have only recently been submitted, is worthy of special mention. The institution is now temporarily transacting business at No. 2 Union-square. The location selected by the directors is the lot on the south-east corner of Fourth-avenue and Fourteenth-street, formerly occupied by the Belvidere Hotel, which, although it was a large building in good repair, has been taken down, to make room for the proposed new banking-house. Owing to the rock formation in this part of the City, a great amount of labor has been required and time consumed in blasting, &c., in order to prepare the foundations for the imposing and solid structure to be placed upon them. The lot is a large one, irregular in form, in size as follows: Fourth-avenue, 98 feet 3 inches; angle between avenue and Fourteenth-street, 15 feet; Fourteenth-street front, 100 feet 4 inches; rear, 49 feet 6 inches; and 25 feet 1 inch, respectively. The building, when completed, will cost the entire lot, with extensive vaults extending under the sidewalks. Its total height will be 75 feet, and the divisions, a cellar, basement, and four stories, the ceilings being respectively, cellar, 9 feet; second, 15 feet; third and fourth, 17 feet each. Some idea of the strength of the structure can be formed when it is stated that the walls throughout start from solid rock, while the walls are as follows: Piers and front walls 4 feet 4 inches, side walls 3 feet, interior walls, 20 inches. The avenue and street elevations, which will be of granite, the basement Quincy blue, and the residue of Concord white granite, all the cornices will also be composed of the solid stone. The roof is a Mansard, and the architectural design of the building massive and rich in the extreme. Every precaution has been exercised to render the banking-house entirely fire-proof, the supporting work and girders being of iron, with brick arches turned in between the beams. Heavy iron shutters will be placed upon all the rear windows. The first story will be used for the offices of the Bank, and the basement and upper stories let for offices. The entrance will be on the angle at the intersection of the street and avenue. In the interior the finish will be in the most modern style, all the work being in hard woods. Every convenience will be introduced in the way of gas, &c., while the entire building will be furnished with steam. In all its appointments it is designed to make this bank one of the most elegant of its kind in the City. The total cost will be $300,000, to which sum, if the cost of the land be added, the expense will be over $[illegible]. The architects of the building are Mr. HENRY FERNBACH (the same as of the new Jewish temple above noticed, and EDWARD T. KENDALL. The builder is Mr. CHRISTIAN HEPPACHER.

ANOTHER "FRENCH FLAT HOTEL."

During the past week plans for a new apartment hotel have also been filed, and the lot upon which it is to be erected is a most desirable one, being Fifty-ninth-street, fronting on Central Park, distant 175 feet west of the grand plaza on Fifth-avenue. The lot is 75 feet 8 inches by 90 in depth, and the hotel projected will, when finished, cover this space. The building will be six stories in height, with a basement, and conveniently arranged for the accommodation of about [illegible] families. The material is of brick, the front being of Philadelphia pressed brick, with Ohio stone trimmings. The estimated cost of the structure is $140,000, without reference to the value of the lots. The owners are Messrs. SAYLOR and JOHN H. QUINT, and the architect Mr. J. W. MARSHALL, No. 142 East Fifty-seventh-street.

IMPORTANT CHURCH IMPROVEMENT.

In connection with the proposed new building described above, the new addition and front entrance to the Church of the Heavenly Rest, on Fifth-avenue, between Forty-fifth and Forty-sixth streets, which will be completed in a few days, is also worthy of notice, as when opened it will present one of the finest effects that grace any church avenue. The addition is 50 feet in front, and cost $60,000. The height of the tower is 80 feet, and it is surrounded by a slight Mansard roofed tower, an ornamental iron work, and a Latin cross. The front is of heavy cut stone, elaborately wrought into arabesque patterns. The top vestibule is to be furnished with three life-size statues in the same stone. The central figure is that of the Redeemer, the side figures being angels. The number of sittings is increased by this new space from 700 to [illegible]. The entire dimensions are now 70 by 120 feet. The interior is one of the most ornate and peculiar of any in the Episcopal denomination. The height of the roof is sixty feet, and is finished in butternut, as is all the rest of the woodwork except the chancel, which is in black walnut. Along the left wall are four niches containing life-size figures of the Evangelists, executed in oil, with gold back grounds. Over the altar is also an exquisite picture of "Christ, the High Priest," by Ommeg. It is 12 by 15. The Saviour is the central figure, and is represented as interceding for the people, who are on either side, some in attitudes of adoration. Over this part of the church is an elegant canopy of carved walnut, supported by white marble columns inlaid with gold. There are six columns also, respectively of red, blue, and Irish Victoria granite, with carved capitals, in figures of the rose, lily, and [illegible]-leaves, intermingled with olive and palm branches. The font is of Caen stone, resting upon four columns of black and yellow marble, having a base of three layers in French grayst, Victoria red, and Irish black marble. Main stained glass, with finely-wrought symbols of the Crucifixion, transmits a pleasant light, and gives a mellow tone to all the interior decorations. The basement supplies a new and spacious Sunday-school room, with a large kitchen attached. The total expense to date, including the lot, is [illegible]. The organ is a fine one, and was built by HOWLAND and CONRAD.

The Return of the Regiment of British Troops from Montreal.

From the Montreal Gazette, Nov. 22.

The last of our garrison, 100 men of the Fifteenth Rifles, left here last evening for Quebec, and the old barracks, which have been occupied by Imperial troops since the conquest, are now in other hands. This has been so long expected that it excites little surprise, but it is difficult to reflect upon it without a degree of mingled regret. Quebec itself will follow in a longer or shorter time, but scarcely less than half the citadel of Quebec has been evacuated are we now virtually independent. With the force passed away from these regions the power of Britain who thus transfers into our own hands our coming destinies. These have been so long and so amicably linked in the mutual exercise on the one hand of duty, and on the other of protection, that they cannot be severed without sadness; and the red coat of the line will long be remembered with pride, the lotus hope, if need were, the courage of the wearer be emulated by our volunteers. These may, possibly, no more be seen on our streets, but the recollection of the days when they mingled with the dark lines of the militia in many a historic and victorious field will not cease to be cherished. The bitterness of the conquest, and of the rancorous contests with the United States are forgotten; and though, so to speak, the school of the art of war is left to us, let it be hoped that the excesses of that art will long be unknown within our borders. The departure of the last of the troops yesterday evening, was significant, and will hereafter be set down as such by the future historian. The lagoons that are being withdrawn, if need be, can return; but a new era is henceforth pure—and not the less fraught with [illegible]

WE OFFER FOR SALE

Evansville, Henderson and Nashville Railroad

FIRST MORTGAGE 7 PER CENT. BONDS, due in 1907, interest payable on the first days of January and July, at the BANK OF AMERICA, New-York.

The line of this road extends from HENDERSON, on the OHIO RIVER, to the State line of TENNESSEE, passing through the rich corndields of Western Kentucky, and forming important connections with CHICAGO, NASHVILLE, the SOUTH and EAST. Seventy-nine miles are completed, at a cost of $2,500,000, raised almost entirely from stock subscriptions, having only seventy miles to be built, which section is nearly ready for the iron, and will be completed and opened by January next.

The net earnings are very quite large, and there is no reasonable doubt that the extensive local traffic and important connections of the road will make it abundantly remunerative to the stockholders.

The first and only mortgage of all the property and franchises of the Company is for ONE MILLION DOLLARS, (or $10,000 per mile,) payable as above.

More than $500,000 of the bonds have been already negotiated, and the remainder will be sold for the present at 81 and accrued interest; at which rate they constitute a very desirable investment.

Further information will be furnished on application to us.

SECOND PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH, Madison-st., near Lexington-av. Rev. J. R. Adams, D. D., pastor. Preaching SUNDAY, Dec. 4, at 10½ A. M. and 7½ P. M. Subject for the morning, "Let Patience Have Her Perfect Work." All are invited.

RIGHT REV. BISHOP LITTLEJOHN will preach on SUNDAY EVENING, Dec. 4, in St. Thomas' Church, corner 5th-av. and 53d-st. Services to commence at 7½ o'clock. All are cordially invited.

REV. MR. GANSE, OF THE NORTH-Reformed Reformed Church, having recently removed to No. 155 East 61st-st., in the neighborhood of their new church edifice, corner Madison-av. and 57th-st., his congregation met last Thursday evening to welcome him in his new home. The meeting was intended as a surprise, and was completely successful in every agreeable feature of such an attempt. A spacious and quiet choice dinner on the centre-table, filled the rooms with a delicate fragrance that harmonized with the spirit of the guests. After some time had been spent in pleasant social intercourse, the meeting was called to order by Mr. A. J. BROWN, who in a neat and appropriate speech, tendered to his minister and colleague the congratulations of his people, and at the same time presented to him certain more substantial tokens of their kind feelings, embodied in a form which Rivers chooses the heart of a minister of the Gospel. The address was responded, with unlimited wit and feeling, in his usual happy manner, in impromptu addresses, thanking his people warmly for this evidence of their affectionate regard, and expressing the pleasure with which he is being passed an evening of pure enjoyment, which every one present will long remember. The Madison-avenue Reformed Church, as this congregation will be called in the future, are worshiping at Association Hall, but expect to take possession of their new church about the 1st day of May next. From the spirit of energy and harmony thus far displayed by them, their subscription promises fairly to be a decided with large success. Their building will be an architectural embellishment to the part of the City where it is located, and their Pastor has every qualification to give successful direction to the building up a Christian church that shall embody and exemplify the doctrines of the gospel.

PARIS IN NEW-YORK.

Great Improvements in Silver-Work and Jewelry—The Best Paris Workmen Now in this City—Extensive Workmanship Displayed.

There are few departments of industrial art in which greater improvements have been made of late years than in silver-work and jewelry. Until a comparatively recent period, a very high artistic standard was rarely aimed at. The finer specimens of work in gold or silver were generally imported from abroad, and although good substantial articles were produced here, the best models were seldom imitated. In this respect a very great change has been made, and to no one house is the advance so much due as to TIFFANY & Co., who have stood so long at the head of their profession in this City. They have pursued, for some years past, the endeavor to elevate every branch of manufacture within their range, and have now arrived at a point at which they may safely boast of excelling almost all foreign competitors.

This is the result of great enterprise and liberality, directed by experienced judgment. People who have been in the habit of "dropping in" at the old store in Broadway, now closed, must have noticed, for years past, how the workmanship of all the articles exhibited was gradually assuming a higher form. Skilled labor was sought for in all quarters, and as first-rate excellence was always aimed at, the result was that inferior productions were very seldom seen on the shelves or in the cases.

The war in Europe has accidentally led to a fresh advance in this direction. The best workmen in Paris have been obliged to seek for employment elsewhere, and the foremost among them were at once engaged by the enterprising firm whose new premises on the corner of Broadway and Fifteenth-street have added so much to the outward attractions of the City. These French artists have found congenial occupation, and a hearty appreciation, in New-York. The work of one of them especially deserves to be exhibited by the side of the famous masterpieces of the age. He constructs the most delicate and beautiful designs in those precious stones which are ordinarily extremely difficult of management. There are specimens of flowers made of diamonds which are marvels of workmanship—every curve being as perfect as if it were made of some plastic material which could be readily moulded into any form. These are the productions which people used to seek for eagerly in Paris, and which never failed to bring enormous prices. They are now made in our own City, and sold at rates far more reasonable than Parisian rarity-hunters ever hoped for. There is probably no collection of diamonds at present to be seen in any store in the world equal to that which TIFFANY & Co. have on exhibition.

The silver-ware, seals, made by the workmen of the firm on their own premises, will render clear to the most casual observer the progress which has been made in this department of art. There is a kind of unpolished silver which may almost be called a specialty of this house—they, at least, have brought it to greater perfection than has been known elsewhere. One large "cup" may be seen, with birds and flowers upon it, which, in former times, would have been competed for by half the royal houses of Europe. It is worthy of a place by the side of the finest examples the silversmith ever produced. The striking feature in the whole collection is the excellence and purity of the taste in even the smallest articles. Charming designs have been copied, even for a tea-pot or a cream-jug, and the mere possession of a silver tea-service is very little compared with the taste which any purchaser may evince by choosing with moderate care from these specimens. For presents to young couples who have rejected Mr. Punch's celebrated advice to "those about to marry"—namely, don't—this unpolished silver affords a most tempting field of choice. Indeed, there are very few persons to whom a specimen of it could be presented who would not be disposed to prize the gift more than one of much greater cost, but of less intrinsic merit and beauty.

It is greatly owing to the artistic finish of articles used in daily life that the firm has made so great a success. In former times, a tea-service might be very massive, and the chasing sometimes pretty—but, as a rule, really beautiful designs were not often seen. When they were to be had, the price placed them beyond the reach of ordinary purchasers. TIFFANY & Co. have solved the difficult problem of producing an article of surpassing excellence at moderate prices. Silver-ware as heavy as our forefathers delighted in is now made, but it is transmuted into exquisite shapes. Models have been copied from Etruscan vases, from the Pompeiian relics, from Greek sculptures, from every source to which art lent a special charm. The utmost scope is given to the ingenuity of native workmen, and if they have original ideas, they may at once give expression to their genius in any metal which suits them. Thus it arises that the display of silver-ware at TIFFANY'S is far finer, more varied, and better selected than could be found at any silversmith's abroad.

It is one of the most praiseworthy characteristics of this eminent firm that it has by no means exclusively studied the rich in its efforts to advance the jeweler's art. It has bestowed just as much attention on the article which a poor man might reasonably afford to give his wife or daughter at Christmas, as on the suite of pearls or diamonds fit for a millionaire. The customer with only a few dollars in his pockets need not be afraid to go into this store, grand as it looks, and ask for what he wants. He may find a brooch or ring of exquisite workmanship, and perfect taste, or a charming bit of silver-ware, or a clock, or some article designed as much for use as for ornament, quite within the compass of his means. This class of custom is indeed carefully encouraged by Messrs. TIFFANY & Co., as it well deserves to be, for it represents the most numerous portion of the community. The beautiful things which are made for children and young persons in this establishment are well worthy the attention of all who take an interest in a noble art. If any one wishes to buy a pearl necklace worth $12,000 or $16,000, he can find a lovely one here; but he can also make a good investment of less than half-a-dozen dollars. It has always been a favorable peculiarity of the house that its agents are as attentive to the poor as to the rich, and men better acquainted with their business, or taking a more intelligent interest in it, could nowhere be found than in this store. Some of them, like Mr. MACAURAN, are so closely and honorably identified with the house, that it seems difficult to understand how one could get on without the other.

The collection of rare and precious stones now possessed by this firm is one of the finest in the world. There are sapphires of the purest color, and yellow diamonds which might turn an Indian Prince's head with envy. There are also some fine examples of the jade-stone, harder than iron, and not often seen out of Eastern lands. A jade vase, and a scarf-pin of beautiful workmanship, are among the collection. As for the bronzes, nothing equal to them has ever been brought to this country before. They were chosen in Paris during the war, and luckily were sent away before communications were stopped. In this department, also, the means of all classes have been studied. There is nothing in the whole store, large or small, which does not display the exercise of a cultivated taste.

Establishments like these are a credit to the City, and deserve all the popularity which rewards their enterprising founders. The new stores which have been lately opened, like those of TIFFANY & Co., LORD & TAYLOR, CONSTABLE & Co., NICOLL & DAVIDSON, and others, are not only an evidence of increasing prosperity in the community, but also prove that the clearing in finances of late are not idle. From this point of view alone they merit all the attention which we can bestow upon them.

The European mails have been late this week, but Mr. BRENTANO, of No. 37 Union-square, is among the first to receive the best of their literary contents. The Graphic fully keeps up its old excellence, some of the engravings in the current number being equal to anything yet produced by the newspaper press. The Illustrated London News is also good, and Punch, Nature and the Saturday Review present their usual attractions.

THE TURF.

A Large Attendance and Good Sport at Fleetwood Park—Lady Rose Beats Hirons in Three Straight Heats.

The weather has been surprisingly favorable for racing during the Fall, and yesterday, the second day of Winter, the air was as mild and balmy, and the sunlight as pleasant as in September. Two trots were announced at the Fleetwood Park Course, and nearly all the gentlemen drivers on the road found it convenient to extend their ride to that pleasant track, so that the gathering at the Club-house was unusually large, and many famous trotters were carefully blanketed, and placed in waiting under the commodious sheds.

Two trots were advertised to come off, but one, it seems, was trotted privately on Thursday. The horses engaged were JOHN ROGERS' b. g. Harry Schuyler and A. OPELL'S br. m. Tessie, the match being for $500. Tessie distanced Harry Schuyler in the first heat, the time being 2:38.

The race yesterday was for a purse and stake of $500, mile heats, best three in five, and JOHN LOVETT'S b. m. Lady Rose, Mr. BELLENGER'S b. g. Hiram, and Mr. WHIPPLE'S ch. g. Angelina were in. The betting at first was $100 Angelina to $65 on the other two, and then Angelina was drawn and the odds were laid on Lady Rose at the rate of $100 to $60, although she trotted to wagon and Hiram is a harness.

In the first heat Lady Rose led all through by three or four lengths, and won at the finish by three lengths in 2:36. The second heat was more closely contested, Hiram heading the Lady at the half-mile pole, but he soon broke, the Lady took the lead again and beat him four lengths in 2:34½. In the third and last heat Hiram acted very badly, breaking on the first turn again at the half-mile pole and at the head of the stretch. Lady Rose led all the way and won by three lengths. Time—2:37½. The following is the

The Caisson of the East River Bridge on Fire—The Works Damaged to the Extent of $20,000.

At a late hour on Thursday night, fire was discovered in Chamber No. 2 of the East River Bridge, Brooklyn, caused, it is supposed, by a spark from a candle in the hands of one of the workmen coming in contact with the oakum with which the seams of the wood-work are caulked. Information of the fact was at once sent to Chief Engineer KINGSLEY, who on repairing to the spot ordered the caisson to be filled with steam, but at the same time forbade the men making any communication to the Fire Department of the city. These orders were strictly obeyed, and every effort was made to extinguish the flames, but without success, for although apparently suppressed, they kept reappearing at short intervals during the entire night, until between 9 and 10 o'clock yesterday morning, seeing that the efforts of his force had been without the desired effect, Mr. KINGSLEY communicated with the city Fire Department, and in a few minutes had their entire strength at his disposal. By this time, however, such progress had the flames made that fears were entertained that the entire structure, worth about $1,000,000, would be destroyed, and it was not until 2 o'clock in the afternoon that the confidence was restored, and that was after the entire apartment had been filled with water. In the meantime a large force of men from the Navy-yard, under the command of Mr. HENRY ARMSTRONG, in conjunction with a force of volunteers on the river, had been constantly employed in pouring water down the shaft at the rate of 40,000,000 gallons per hour. The difficulty about the matter was that while the flames were at the top of the caisson they could only be reached by filling the entire structure with water, and thus driving the air out, and submerging the entire work. It was, of course, impossible for the men to go down into the pit, (for such it was,) and throw water directly upon the ignited timber. Another difficulty was experienced in the sudden diminution of air, it being a question whether a collapse would not follow upon it, caused by the pressure from the outside. In the course of time, however, all these difficulties solved themselves, and at 4 o'clock the flames were extinguished and the work saved. As the chamber was and is now filled with water, it was of course impossible to ascertain the amount of damage actually done, but the engineers on the spot stated that it could not possibly fall short of $20,000.

This is the fifth fire that has broken out since the work was commenced, and the danger from this cause has increased in proportion as the caisson approaches completion. Indeed the quality of the air at the present time is such that it is next to impossible to blow out a candle; even a spark will relight it.

To make all things safe, Mr. KINGSLEY has determined to allow the water now in the structure to remain there until Monday morning, when the process of pumping it out will be commenced.

The Working Men's Union—A Strike of the Crispins.

The regular meeting of the Working Men's Union was held at No. 327 Bowery, last evening. The Committee appointed to wait on the Commissioners of Charities reported that the building to which reference was made was contracted for before the Eight-hour law was passed by the Legislature, and they could not abrogate their contracts for that work, but that all labor contracted for in the future would be done under the Eight-hour law. The report was received. The delegate from the Tailors reported the strike as still continuing. A law-suit was referred to by the delegate, in which a man by the name of BLISSERT was summoned before Justice COX for an assault on an employer. The delegate said that they found that BLISSERT was in a tight place, as they got a member of the organization, who had recently been elected to office, to go on the bench with Justice COX, and the result was that BLISSERT was discharged. He said that there was another case, in which an employer was the assailant, and an attempt would be made to send him up on the Island, and thereby his business would be broken up.

Mr. NELSON W. YOUNG, the Chairman, stated that as he was the party referred to by the previous speaker he would say that the only influence he used with the Judge was to convince him that most of the trouble between working men was caused by middle men. The result was the discharge of BLISSERT.

The Varnishers and Polishers reported business brisk, and no men out of employment. The Crispins reported that the employers were determined to stop work on Monday next, in order to disrupt the organization. The Joint Council have determined to resist this action to the utmost. There are 3,000 or 4,000 hands employed on team work alone. It was stated that thirty or forty houses on Monday next, offer the alternative of giving up Crispinism or go on the street. They had determined to keep Crispinism and go on the street, if necessary.

Another Crispin reported that the bosses had determined to cut down wages next week. One man was building a large factory outside the City, in which he was going to employ Chinamen. This man's name was WHITEHOUSE, with whom the Crispins had had trouble in regard to the prison contract system. The organization were prepared for such a movement on the part of the bosses, rather than allow to cut down wages or to employ coolie workmen.

It was suggested that the Working Men's Union visit the various organizations represented here, and excite them to some energetic action by speeches, and in any other way that may be suggested. The suggestion was put in the form of a motion, and carried.

The moral and financial aid of the Union was tendered the Crispins, in case they should want money to sustain them in the coming strike. The Union pledged all the moral aid required. A delegate stated that the lock-out would commence on Monday or Tuesday, as orders had been given to finish all work on Saturday night, and now was the time for the Union to declare that it was in sympathy with the Crispins. They ask no increase of wages, but the determination of the bosses was to disrupt the organization.

Mr. YOUNG stated that the movement against the Crispins was not the only one, but that the tailors would next be taken in hand, and there was a united determination among the employers to adopt, at this season of the year, measures which would look to the disruption of these organizations. He stated that prompt action be taken by the delegates to meet this attack at the outset, and present a firm front. Labor organizations in other cities had been crushed out, but if earnest action was taken now, the combinations of the employers would be frustrated.

A delegate moved that the Secretary write to the amalgamated carpenters of England for statistics, in order to refute the arguments to be presented to the Legislature in favor of prison labor. The motion was carried.

It was moved that a special committee be appointed to co-operate with the Crispins in seeking to allay any difficulties that may arise between laborer and employer. The motion was carried and the Committee on Arbitration was appointed to perform that duty.

The Union then adjourned.

Harper's Weekly is unusually good this week. There are many original illustrations in it of very striking merit—notably, a double-page one with "War Time in Bavaria" as its subject. It is a drawing of great power and originality, and ought to be preserved among the records of the momentous period through which we are passing. Harper's Bazar is also full of attractions, and must be welcome in every home.

LOCAL NEWS IN BRIEF.

NEW-YORK.

CHARLES THOMAS, a clerk in the wholesale store of A. T. STEWART & Co., at No. 376 Broadway, was arrested yesterday morning, as he was leaving the premises with a shawl, valued at $8, in his possession. CHARLES immediately confessed that he had stolen twenty-seven shawls, at different times during the month of November, the aggregate value of the property taken being nearly $200. The prisoner was arraigned before Justice HOGAN at the Tombs and held for petit larceny, as the dates of the previous larcenies could not be specified by the complainant, Mr. WILLIAM WILDS, superintendent of the shawl department.

At the monthly meeting of the County Woman's Suffrage Society, yesterday afternoon, at the parlors of the Association, Broadway, corner of Sixteenth-street, Mrs. ELIZA GRAY, chairman of a committee appointed to wait on United States Congressmen and State Senators to ascertain their views in regard to woman suffrage, reported that the Committee had personally interviewed ROBERT B. ROOSEVELT, Wm. M. ROBERTS, SAMUEL S. COX, SMITH ELY, Jr., JAMES BROOKS, and FERNANDO WOOD, United States Congressmen, and found three in favor of the movement. There were not opposed, but were not prepared to declare publicly in its favor. Of the State Senators, only two were seen, and they required more time before committing themselves. The other four were not to be found in their offices at any hour of the day or any day of the week. To these notes had been sent, which yet remained unanswered.

The eleventh anniversary of the death of JOHN BROWN was celebrated, last evening, at Shiloh Presbyterian Church, (colored,) at the corner of Prince and Marion streets. Among the assemblage, which was large, were many white ladies and gentlemen, drawn thither by the prospect of the advent of several distinguished speakers. The services were opened by Rev. H. H. GARNET, the pastor, who reviewed, step by step, the career of JOHN BROWN in the anti-slavery cause, until the moment of his execution. He was followed by T. S. W. TITUS, (who read BROWN's last speech,) Rev. Mr. BUTLER, Mr. POWELL and others.

Detectives EUSTACE, WOOLDRIDGE and TILLY arrested JOHN GRADY, a jewelry-peddler, a well-known character to the Police, upon a charge of stealing a case of silver watches worth $1,200, from a store belonging to ISAAC BLESSING, of No. 520 South-street, which was standing in front of the store at the time the theft was committed. The only evidence yet obtained against GRADY is the fact that he sold one of the watches to Mr. SAUNE, of No. 31 John-street, and pawned others, being a resident of the Fulton Market Police Court, was remanded by Judge SHANDLEY to Police Head-quarters to give the detectives an opportunity to obtain further proofs.

At the last meeting of the Board of Managers of the American Bible Society, grants of books were made to the Missionary Society of Friends, in Washington; Presbyterian Committee of Home Missions; Military Post Library Association, N. Y.; American Tract; Friend Society; and Chinese Testaments for Chinamen at North Adams. The whole number of volumes granted is 4,551, and $2,000 were appropriated for the employment of Bible distributers among the Chinamen on the Pacific coast.

HOWE and COBBAN, pastors, are preparing for a Fair, to take place this Winter, in aid of the fund necessary to liquidate the indebtedness occasioned by the recent improvement made in the church edifice.

Prof. AUSTIN FLINT, Jr., delivered the introductory lecture of a series on Physiology, last evening, at Association Hall, Twenty-third-street and Fourth-avenue, under the auspices of the Young Men's Christian Association. The lecture was attended by the usual body, erratic west and east, dietetics and digestion were the subjects which he passed under review. His audience was instructed and delighted.

Attorney-General AKERMAN visited the Federal building, in Chambers-street, yesterday morning, for the purpose of seeing District-Attorney DAVIS and Marshal SHARPE. He held a long consultation with the former officer. In reply to a report circulated, to certain Cuban expeditions which, it is said, are being fitted out to leave this port.

For several months the small-pox has prevailed in Newark, though not to a very alarming degree. The Board of Health found it necessary a few weeks ago to call the attention of physicians to the fine for not reporting all cases of this disease to the Board. While a few days the malady has seemed to be on the increase, and thirty cases are known to exist at present. Extra precautions against the spread of the disease are called for, as new cases are daily being reported.

The mystery attending the fatal shooting of PATRICK VAUGHAN, alias George Johnson, was deepened yesterday by the discovery that the names and addresses given to the hospital by the two men who were the bearers of the deceased to him were purely fictitious. Coroner SCHIRMER will endeavor to ascertain the truth in the case.

ISRAEL WOOD, the bar-keeper who shot himself at No. 178 South-street, on Thursday afternoon, died yesterday at the Park Hospital. It has been ascertained that the deceased had been drinking excessively for some time, and was partially deranged in consequence. An inquest will be held today by Coroner ROLLINS at No. 76 Third-avenue, where the remains were removed.

Mr. and Mrs. JOHN MORTIMER gave a reception, last evening, at their residence, No. 29 West Thirty-second-street, to the young ladies and gentlemen connected with the Fifth-avenue Presbyterian Church, of which Rev. Dr. JOHN HALL is the pastor. The gathering was very select and recherché, and the evening was spent in dancing and social amusements.

The steam-boat Drew, of the People's line, which left New-York on Thursday night at 9 o'clock, with freight, was aground, off Pelham's Island, met with an accident to her machinery, and was towed in to Newburg. The steamer St. John, of the same line, will be put on in her place today.

A Masonic social was given by Atlas Lodge, No. 216, F. and A. M., at their rooms, No. 102 Broadway, last evening. A lecture, entitled "Eastern Star," was delivered by HERMAN G. CARTER, and choice selections of music by H. MILLARD were given with fine effect.

The Board of Excise yesterday passed a resolution directing the Attorney of the Board to prosecute all parties who have failed to comply with the requirements of the Excise law by omitting to take out licenses.

The flags on the City Hall were at half-mast yesterday as a mark of respect to Senator BLOOD, whose funeral took place yesterday.

The new Court-house Commissioners have accepted their appointments, and been sworn in.

BROOKLYN.

FENTON LAWLER died at the Long Island College yesterday of injuries which he received in the Brooklyn lumber-yard on Monday last. The Coroner held an inquest.

There were four new cases of small-pox discovered in the Sixteenth Ward yesterday. It is believed by the Health Officer that the disease will not be permitted to spread beyond that locality. Some complaint was made by Mayor SCHROEDER against those engaged in moving the sufferers to the hospital at Flatbush, but Dr. COCHRAN says that all that can be done under the circumstances to alleviate the pain of the sufferers will be done.

JOHN BROUGHTON, the keeper of the colored gambling saloon at the corner of Fulton and Bond streets, which was seized on the night of Saturday last, was yesterday bound in $800 by Justice BUCKLEY, to keep the peace for one year. In view of the fact it may be noted that while the poor negroes were disturbed in their ten-cent game of bluff, there were dozens of well-known flash gambling houses around the Police Head-quarters, doing a slashing business with impunity.

G. W. MALMBERG, a poorly-shod and still more poorly-clothed member of the dramatic fraternity, whose last engagement was at the "Olympic," was yesterday taken into custody by Detective FOWERS, for carrying off, without leave, a pair of shoes from the store of L. S. SONNEBIN, of Fulton-street.

LONG ISLAND.

Yesterday morning a well-dressed and respectable appearing woman was arrested by Officer RAMSIE, as she was about entering the cars for New-York, at Babylon. It seems that she had been in the employment of Mr. JOHN LUX, of that village, and had left that morning; but before taking her final departure, managed to steal a gold watch and chain, valued at $150, belonging to Mrs. LUX. It was found upon her person. The loss of the watch was not discovered until a few minutes before the train arrived.

On Thursday evening a showman by the name of JONES hired the new M. E. Church at East Setauket, for the purpose of exhibiting some panoramic views. At the close of the exhibition he said to the trustees that, as it was rather late, he would settle in the morning. Early in the morning the showman packed up and started for Holdbrook Station, forgetting to pay the rent of the church. The constable was dispatched after him, and he was overhauled just as he was taking the train.

NEW-JERSEY.

The stables of MICHAEL DOLAN, a contractor on the West Line Railroad, at Millington, N. J., were burned with their contents, Thursday night. Twelve horses, a large quantity of single and double harness, a fine carriage and sobe, and a large number of tools were destroyed. The loss will amount to fully $5,000, on which there is no insurance. The conflagration was undoubtedly the result of incendiarism.

JOHN GRATZ, of Metuchin, was killed at Menlo Park, on the New-Jersey Railroad, on Thursday evening. He was walking on the track, and in attempting to step out of the way of an approaching train, was run over by a train coming from the opposite direction.

The Lincoln Division Sons of Temperance, of Elizabeth, dedicated their new Hall on Thursday night. Several other Divisions were represented at the dedication, and a grand time was enjoyed.

THOMAS LAFON, of Newark, who was two years ago imprisoned for manslaughter, and pardoned out, is again in trouble. He was before the Police Court yesterday morning for fighting, and was fined for the offense.

I'll fight it out on this line if it takes all Summer," said President GRANT. So says PARKER FYLE, who uses and recommends all adulterated Soaps. Mr. FYLE makes a strictly pure article, and there is no doubt his "O. K." Soap is the cheapest in the end. The amount of labor and clothing saved by its use in a family is no small item. Sold by all grocers.
